BUSINESS MEN, WHO FEAR MERGER, FLOCK TO HISGEN'S STANDARD

CANDIDATE ADDRESSES HAMDEN COUNTY TRAFFIC ASSOCIATION.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 8.—Evidence that hundreds and thousands are breaking away from the old parties and flocking to the standard of Thomas L. Hisgen has been received by the candidate for Governor of the Independence League of Massachusetts.

This gratifying information has rolled into the possession of Mr. Hisgen with increasing volume since the Republicans and Democrats held their conventions. The Democrats declare that they are going to support the Independence Leaguer because of the platform upon which he stands and the disgraceful procedure at the twin conventions in this city. Republicans are rallying to his support because of their general disgust of Guild's inactivity and the attitude of his party on the merger.

Mr. Hisgen last evening, at the request of the Hampden County Traffic Association, addressed that body on the merger. This association is composed of live young business men of the Connecticut valley who represent business that aggregates more than fifty millions of dollars. This meeting was held at Chicopee Falls.

LEADING DEMOCRATS TO SUPPORT HISGEN.

This organization, non-political, is out and out against the swallowing of the Boston & Maine Railway by the New Haven. They do not care a rap whose political toes they tramp on—they will fight the proposition at the polls.

While the association may not take action as a body, one of the members told a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN that they would use their influence for the election of "Tom" Hisgen to the gubernatorial chair. When this is fully known it will have a tremendous influence, it is believed, throughout the State.

Mr. Hisgen yesterday and to-day received assurance of support that almost carried him, coat as he is, off his feet. This came in person from men on the street, in hotel corridors, on cars, over the telephone and throughout the city.

The leading Democrats of Springfield have not only told him that he was sure of their votes but that they would work to insure his election.

When Mr. Hisgen appeared before the traffic association one of the members said:

"Mr. Hisgen, we want you to tell us how you stand on the merger."

Mr. Hisgen arose and pulled a copy of the platform of the League as adopted at the Faneuil Hall Convention from his pocket and read the flat-footed plank against the merger. He was instantly thanked by an unanimous vote of the association. He then addressed the body briefly.

"There is no doubt or wavering," he said, "as to where we stand on this merger. We don't want it. We are fighting against it. It is the real battle cry of this campaign, regardless of the attempt that is being made to obliterate it from the field of public discussion at this time.

DUTY OF EVERY VOTER IN STATE.

"This is a question that appeals to business men of all kinds as well as to workingmen. You, as a traffic association, know what effect such a monopoly of shipping facilities would have on your business.

"I know that this is not a political organization and I am not addressing you as a politician. The fact is I have given the politicians a wide berth since I entered the field as a candidate for the nomination for Governor on the Independence League ticket.

"I have preferred to meet men heart to heart, at their homes, in the fields, on the street or at their places of business.

"I believe that every citizen, regardless of past or present political affiliations, should vote for the men and the party that stand out boldly and fearlessly against the merger of these two railways."

Members of the association then told how they had taken their request to the two other parties that anti-merger planks be inserted in their platforms. The results were disappointing.

This traffic association does not propose to support any candidate of any character in this section of the State who does not come out unequivocally against the merger.

They will work for the defeat of any candidate on the State ticket for the House or Senate who is a merger man.

HOW MEMBERS QUESTION CANDIDATES.

They propose to question all candidates on this. Each man will be put on record.

"I was introduced to a certain candidate for Mayor the other evening," said one of the members at the meeting, "and I immediately asked him how he stood on the merger. 'I don't know,' he replied. 'Well,' the member answered, 'I don't think you are any good as a candidate if you don't know where you stand, and I wouldn't support you in any case.'"

This gives an idea of how these men mean business. They have been members of both parties. And they propose to spread the fight through this entire section of the State. Business men of Holyoke and other cities have taken the same stand, it was said.

The various boards of trade of this section are to be asked to join the Traffic Association in their fight. One of Mr. Hisgen's valuable converts is Herman Buchholz. He has eight sons and they are all voters.

"I will not only vote for you, Tom," said Mr. Buchholz, "but I'll get you 400 more votes."

On the car going out to Chicopee Falls, a well dressed man who is connected with one of the largest business houses in this city stepped up to Mr. Hisgen, and said:

"Well, I'm for you and another man just told me the same before I got on the car."

ALL SPRINGFIELD REPORTED SOLID.

"Yes," chipped in another passenger, "and I want to tell you one thing, if there is a man in West Springfield who will not vote for Hisgen I do not know who he is."

The Springfield newspapers have been unusually favorable in their treatment of Mr. Hisgen. In speaking of Mr. Buchholz, William G. McKechnie and Emil Wunsch, all three of whom have come out for Hisgen, the Springfield Union said:

"All three of these men are prominent Democrats and stand high in the esteem of Springfield citizens. Their influence is strong and far reaching. By their bolt from the ranks the Democratic party has lost many votes, and the Independence League gained some powerful campaign ammunition.

"Mr. McKechnie for years was State committeeman. Mr. Buchholz is one of the park commissioners, and Mr. Wunsch is a well-known Democrat. With these men many other Democrats have joined with the Independence League and the coming fight for the Governorship."

The people of Springfield have little interest in what decision the ballot law commissioners reach relative to the two conventions held here. They are of the opinion that the Democrats disgraced the city, and apparently few of them are going to vote for either candidate.

MOTORMAN KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Henry Smith, a Boston Elevated Railway gooternan for fifteen years, who lived at No. 825 Broadway, Everett, was instantly killed by picking up a live wire at Maplewood Square, Malden, this morning.

The wire, which had fallen from the poles of the Malden Electric Company, was being guarded by Patrolman Burke of Malden. Burke yelled to Smith not to touch it, but Smith ignored the warning. His body was taken to Ward's undertaking rooms in Malden.

Smith leaves a wife and several children.

2 SCHOONERS IN PERIL

Life-Savers Unable to Answer Appeal for Assistance Because of Surf.

CHATAM, Oct. 8.—Tugging at the ends of their cables, which threaten every minute to snap, two two-masted lumber laden schooners are lying off Pollock Rip Shoal.

One of them is flying a flag for assistance, but because of the gale and heavy seas, which pound against the beach, the life-savers of the Monomoy Life Saving Station are unable to launch a boat.

Captain Ellis of the Monomoy station has a power life saving boat ready to put to sea when the gale moderates. Men on patrol believe the vessels will be dashed on the beach.

From the shore the names of the schooners could not be made out this morning.

At 11 o'clock the weather had become so thick that the vessels would not be seen by the life-savers.

If the cables break it is feared the crews of both vessels will meet death in the surf.

Yachts Wrecked.

About fifteen fishermen came into port. Captain Nickerson, with characteristic fishermen's daring, tried to carry light sails on his two Quonsapoynett, and lost his foremast.

A fleet lay all night in President's Roads, unable to get out to sea. The Leyland line steamship Canadian and the Red Star liner Menominee, each with about 115 passengers, are one day overdue.

Yachts were wrecked, buildings damaged and trees blown down in South Boston. The fence of the Locust street ball grounds was partly demolished, blinds and water spouts were blown off most of the houses on Dorchester avenue and Dorchester street and on East Broadway and East Fourth street huge limbs of trees were torn off and fell across the street cars tracks, where they remained, blocking car traffic until wrecking crews could reach them.

About fifteen yachts were cast ashore at City Point, and many of them pounded against the beach until they were broken and strained beyond repair.

Menaced by Steel Coping.

About 2 o'clock this morning the steel coping on top of the Hotel Trafalgar on Massachusetts avenue became unfastened and nearly twenty feet of it hung down in front of the building, threatening every moment to break from its fastenings and fall to the street.

Fruit trees in Dorchester and Milton were badly injured from the storm. The principal streets are strewn with the branches of trees. Trains on the N. Y. N. H. & H., Plymouth division, were delayed early to-day.

In the Metropolitan Park and Blue Hill reservations trees were badly damaged.

Schools Are Closed.

At 8 a. m. the no-school signals were blown in Boston, the storm at that time being at its height.

In many suburban cities and towns no school sessions were held.

PUBLIC GARDENS' GIANT SCALLAX TREE FELLED BY STORM

The "Giant of the Gardens," a magnificent Scallax tree, four feet in diameter, was the chief casualty as a result of the storm in the Boston Public Gardens. The entire garden, as well as Boston Common, were covered with large boughs and many of the cultivated rub-trees were blown over and broken.

A couple of benches were smashed by the big tree as it fell. A piece of ground ten feet by five feet was ripped up on the Charles street side of the pond, where the tree stood.

YACHTS WRECKED; TREES UPROOTED; SCHOOLS CLOSED

After a wild night in Boston and in Massachusetts Bay daylight broke to-day with a southerly gale blowing fifty-five miles and occasionally squalls reaching a velocity of seventy miles. Vessels which managed to work their way to port reported a bad night in the bay. The sailing shippers had to take unusual precautions to save their masts from going overboard.

Shipping in the harbor was in a confused state. About forty coal schooners and barges, most of them lying off South Boston, dragged anchors, notwithstanding most of them had out extra ones. Several of these foiled and smashed bulwarks, but there was no serious damage. Tug boats had a busy time straightening them out.

NEWSBOY HURT BY CAR; MAY DIE

Fred Boeman, a fourteen-year-old newsboy, of No. 479 Beach street, was probably fatally injured by falling from an electric car at West Roxbury early to-day.

The little fellow was standing in front of No. 4241 Washington street when an East Boston car came along. The boy attempted to board the car, as was his usual custom, but he slipped on the step and fell heavily to the ground.

The car was brought to a sudden stop, and the unfortunate boy was taken to a nearby drug store. Dr. Riley was called, and the little fellow was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found he was suffering from a fracture of the skull and a dislocation of the collar bone. His name was immediately put on the dangerous list, and the physicians have only a faint hope for his recovery.

STEAMER HERMAN WINTER IN PERIL WHILE DOCKING

The Metropolitan Line Steamship Herman Winter, attempting to dock at India Wharf was blown nearly to Charlestown Navy Yard and had to dock with the aid of a tug.

The new turbine steamship Yale came in from New York only forty-five minutes late, and Captain Graves was elated at her performance. The 250 passengers were delighted with the way the steamer acted. The seas were tremendous, but the Yale rode them so that very little discomfort was reported.

RECORD Y. M. C. A. ENROLMENT

The Evening Institute of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association opened for the season last evening with the largest enrollment in its history.

Mr. F. B. Speare, educational director, delivered an address, touching upon the great need this country is experiencing for thoroughly trained men in every field of activity.

The largest registration of the evening institute is found in the Polytechnic School, which deals wholly with industrial features.

The real estate lectures began last week, the opening lecture being by Mr. J. Murray Howe.

ALLEGED BIGAMIST BROUGHT TO LYNN

LYNN, Oct. 8.—Police Inspector B. Frank Wright has returned from Syracuse, N. Y., with Charles A. White, who was arrested in that city for the Lynn police last week charged with bigamy. White will obtain a speedy trial. The two women who claim to be his wives will appear to-day.

National German-American Alliance, in Boston To-day as Guests of William R. Hearst, Given Warm Greeting at University—Inspect Germanic Museum and Other Departments.

Declaring that "The Germans have set us the highest standard of free education, and Harvard University has followed in the footsteps of the German Universities," Presiden Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard, to-day welcomed the more than 200 delegates of the National German-American Alliance, who are in Boston as the guests of William Randolph Hearst.

The formal welcome of the great university to its visitors was made after the party had been brought from the Back Bay station in five special trolley cars to Harvard yard. The guests of Mr. Hearst were at once conducted through the Harvard Germanic Museum by Professors Kuno Francke and Hugo Munsterberg.

WELCOMED BY DR. ELIOT.

In the Germanic Museum President Eliot met and welcomed the distinguished party. Among other things he said:

"We always knew that the Germans were strong in science, literature and art. Forty years ago we found that the Germans were strong in the military art. Now we see how well and how much the Germans have accomplished in the fine arts.

"We owe much to Germany, to the Emperor, the Princes and the German people, for they have taught us Americans that Germany is fond of all sorts of learning. Through the German Emperor, professors from Harvard and other American universities have exchanged places with the professors in German universities and from this movement we have gained much.

"During the last four years I have heard some of the finest orators I ever listened to in my life. They are the representatives of the German universities. The Germans have set us the highest standard of free education and Harvard University has followed in the footsteps of German universities, for the academic freedom we now have we first learned in Germany."

CALLS FOR NEW BUILDING.

In the course of the reply which Dr. C. J. Hexamer of New York, president of the National German-American Alliance, made to President Eliot's address of welcome he declared that a new building for the Germanic Museum was necessary. He said:

"One duty as American citizens is to bring about the building of a suitable Germanic museum; one that will be suited to the contents of this building. I hope that within a few years we shall have raised enough money to erect a new building commensurate for the great purpose."

Following Dr. Hexamer, several of the professors of Harvard University addressed the visiting delegates in German.

The visitors, about twenty-five to thirty of whom were women, were delighted with the Germanic Museum. They were loud in their expressions of pleasure and especially were they enthusiastic over the reproduction of the tomb of Peter Flechor, the gift of Emperor William of Germany. The statue of The Great Elector also came in for a outpouring of praise from the visitors, while the Bishop's Chair, another gift from Emperor William, was also greatly admired.

Mr. Hearst and his guests arrived at the Back Bay station at 9:06 o'clock on a special train which had conveyed them from Fall River, where they had come from New York on the Fall River liner Puritan. After many of the party had haughingly posed in front of the station for a photograph they took five special cars for Harvard University.

"We have had a very pleasant trip over from New York," said Mr. Hearst.

Accompanying Mr. Hearst and the party from New York were Professor Julius Goebel, of the chair of Germanic literature at Harvard, and Robert Bacon, one of Boston's prominent German-American citizens.

Met by Reception Committee.

At the Back Bay the party was met by a reception committee which represented the United German societies of Boston, consisting of Professor Vogel, of the German department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Carl Eberhard, Christopher Eberhard, former State Senator Frank Siebertich, Otto Caimus, Louis Prang, C. Heinemann, W. M. Albrecht, A. Koehler, C. W. Holtzer, Carl Wirth, Henry Pickus, Arthur Schmitz and others.

The party arrived at Harvard Square at

Fraud, Force and Riot Convention Methods Denounced by Press

DEMAND EXPRESSED THAT LAW DEFIERS BE SENT TO JAIL.

Leading New England papers continue to condemn the "strong-arm" methods employed at the Democratic State Convention at Springfield, Saturday, both in their editorials and their news columns.

The following are sample remarks:

"Deserve Imprisonment as Criminals."

(From the Pittsfield Evening Journal.)

It is not enough to repudiate Saturday's riotous proceedings at Springfield. It is not enough by legal process to see that the will of the duly elected delegates to the Democratic State convention is not thwarted. It is not enough to undo the injustice of such chicanery, fraud and violence as that perpetrated at Springfield on Saturday last.

Men who will deliberately connive to strike down the sacred rights of the people, who will scheme to disfranchise legally elected delegates, and to trample in the mire the manhood of this Commonwealth, deserve to be imprisoned as criminals who strike blows at the very foundation of our form of government. And the high-up men, who countenance such proceedings and try to reap benefits from them, deserve the contempt of their fellow-citizens.

In the 1904 the Pittsfield Journal confidently and earnestly supported for Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Charles W. Bartlett, who is now in our city. The conduct of this man before, during and since the Democratic fiasco at Springfield, has been such as to make us ashamed of having ever been guilty of advocating his election, and we frankly admit that NEVER AGAIN WILL THIS PAPER SUPPORT HIM FOR ANY OFFICE within the gift of the people of this State. He is the one man who could have prevented the flagrant and insolent violation of fair play and of a decent regard for the rights of the delegates at Springfield, but instead of doing so, he apparently rejoiced in them. There was one "Bartlett delegate" at Springfield whose words "rang right" and hit especially hard. They were those uttered by John Thayer of Worcester, who was given second place on the Bartlett ticket. Said he, right after the convention: "I was prepared to accept this nomination, but the nicknaming methods of the Bartlett managers were too much for me. I WANT NOTHING TO DO WITH BARTLETT or his crowd. I have refused to go on the ticket with him." If treatment like this were meted out to all concerned in such thug tactics and cheap trickery as that employed at Springfield, there would be an end to it.

Pittsfield, and in fact all Berkshire County have good reason to be indignant because all the delegates from this section were disfranchised. Most of them did not get into the theatre at all and not one got in in time to participate in the doings of the convention! On the other hand, Tim Crowley of North Adams, who could not get elected as a delegate in his own city, was among the delegates early and as happy as, but more noisy than, a clam. Many of the Pittsfield and Berkshire delegates were in line as early as 10:30, but their credentials were "turned down" or delays created so that they could not get into the hall.

Both credentials committees reported that 700 delegates were entitled to admission, and though 280 Whitney men made affidavit that they could not get into the hall at all, the editor of this paper counted over 800 present as delegates and estimated that 200 more were in the hall. Several hundred Bartlett supporters were admitted early, and the statement that they were thugs and mischief-makers is no misrepresentation. Hundreds were there who had no right there, and they were admitted by order of Feeney, Kiley and others of the Bartlett contingent.

The Bartlett men leased the hall in their own name and had the giving out of all tickets of admission. They and they alone were responsible for the fact that several hundred people took part in the proceedings who had no right to participate and for the other fact that hundreds of duly elected and with proper credentials were kept in line outside for over two hours and absolutely refused admission. These were largely Whitney delegates, though now and then a Bartlett man could be found, who hadn't been seen early and given a ticket of different color.

There was nothing clever about the matter. It was a high-handed, barefaced fraud, and John P. Feeney, Daniel Kiley, George Fred Williams and Charles W. Bartlett will some day learn that this sort of thing will not be tolerated in Massachusetts.

"Turbulent Circus."

(Springfield Republican.)

"The Democratic convention in Springfield had not been overbilled in its circus features. It will take high place in the political history of the State along with other turbulent performances of the Democracy. The outcome is to widen the breach between the two factions of the party in a way to make any bridging of it before election day quite out of the question.

"No matter what may come from the appeal of the Whitney men to the State ballot law commission, the Democratic nomination this year will be worth nothing."

Williams as Trickster.

(Berkshire Eagle.)

"The march which the Bartlett delegates, under the leadership of George Fred Williams, stole on the rest today finds a parallel in the action of that same astute leader back in 1896—eleven years ago.

"Pittsfield men will remember that George Fred suggested to his followers that they remain in the hall all night. For he said 'the gold Democrats in whose name this hall was hired, are apt to find their way in the wee sma' hours and the Bryan men will be in the soup.' And so we stayed right there,' said a Pittsfield man who was a delegate to the Boston convention. 'If afterward it was said we had been locked in the hall, guarded by several hundred policemen? Well, it was that, at one point at least, the silver men outgeneraled the bolters."

"Detrimental to Democracy."

(Boston Tribune.)

"Detrimental to Democracy," says Hon. John R. Thayer of the late riot on the Connecticut. That is mild to say and best yet.

"All such violations of political decency and good order as that witnessed at Springfield the other day tends to bring nearer the hour when nominations even for the governorship of the Commonwealth will be made by a direct vote of the people."

"Bruiser Methods."

(Providence Journal.)

"In the capture of the Springfield convention by the Bartlett men the strike and bruiser methods of Boston politicians were brazenly exemplified."

Violate Every Principle.

(Portsmouth, N. H., Times, Dem.)

"It is useless to disguise where the blame lies, though it is manifest enough to every intelligent observer, or any one who has given even a hasty reading to the newspaper reports of the manner in which the possession of a tactical advantage in the control of the State Committee by a narrow margin, was taken advantage of to violate every principle of right and transform a decided minority of convention delegates into a present and controlling, though never a deliberately and intelligently acting, majority.

"So long as the mischief is done there is nothing to be gained anywhere, just at present, in placing the responsibility and denouncing the guilty parties. Eventually the masses of the Democratic party of Massachusetts, who are still true to principle and willing to fight for it when honestly and intelligently led, will size up the situation and relegate to the rear the political traitors who tried to use dishonest methods to dominate in the conduct of the State Convention, lest their own plans should miscarry."

Worse Than the Duma.

(Boston Post.)

"The stealing of the Democratic convention at Springfield by the Bartlett mismanagers is denounced with practical unanimity by Democratic newspapers and Democratic leaders throughout the State.

"It could not be otherwise. The offense is too rank to be glossed over. It cannot be condoned or excused. It struck at the foundations of all popular government. It denied to hundreds of Democratic committees the right of representation. It violated the best principles of fair play. The Russian Duma was a paradise of free representation and political prosperity compared to the Kiley convention.

"Not Soon Forgotten."

(Springfield Republican.)

"Boxes in the Court Square Theater that had been duly assigned to newspaper workers were lawlessly seized by Congressman O'Connell and filled with his friends. They were a 'husky' lot, all right. The Boston gang will not soon be forgotten up this way.'

"Chaos of the Democracy."

(Worcester Telegram.)

"It is Henry M. Whitney at the head of one democratic ticket for the State election and Charles W. Bartlett at the head of another, regardless of what the ballot commission may decide. Nomination papers have been taken out for both the babies of the chaos of the democracy, and that is the end of any feverish excitement on that point. There will be long and harrowing discussion as to which shall be considered the regular democratic candidate, but that will prevent the voter of a mess of words one some other subject.

"Inferiority of the Majority."

(New York Tribune.)

"Mr. Bryan ought to be highly interested in the performances of certain friends of his in the Democratic organization in Massachusetts. He succeeded in that State in capturing the party machinery and nominating a State ticket by calmly asserting the inherent inferiority of the majority to the enlightened remnant. The misguided majority was generously permitted by Mr. Bryan's representatives to act as a Greek chorus in the background of Springfield's largest theatre while the minority, favored with tickets for the front seats, gave an exhibition of government without the use of the referendum."

"What's It All About?"

(New York Times.)

"It would be interesting to outsiders to know what the Democratic factions in the old Bay State think they are fighting about. It can scarcely be the spoils of a possible victory this year, since their bitter contentions make a victory impossible. It may be the control of the party machinery for the Presidential year, but what is the use of Springfield's largest theatre while the minority, favored with tickets for the front seats, gave an exhibition of government without the use of the referendum."

"Riot and Rebellion."

(Springfield Union.)

"The voters of Springfield had an opportunity on Saturday to observe the Democratic party at close range, and when the time comes to send men to the State House to represent Springfield it is reasonable to believe that this city will select men that are not identified with the party of riot and rebellion."

Subversion of Democracy.

(Hartford Post.)

"The principle so generously violated at Springfield is fundamental in Democracy. It cannot be ignored; much less can it be overridden with violence. If the method were to be tolerated, it would mean the subversion of the Democratic idea."

"Foolhardy Wrangle."

(Holyoke Telegram.)

"The Democrats of Holyoke are disgusted at the situation in which they are left as a result of the convention—to wit conventions—in Springfield. The city has shown right along that it cared little for Governor Guild. Even Republicans who have almost never voluntarily cast a straight party ticket were prepared to cast their ballot for the Democratic nominee this year. But such men to-day affirm that they have very little confidence in leaders whose counsel directs into such a foolhardy wrangle as took place in Springfield Saturday."

For Guild or Hisgen.

(Chicopee Correspondence Springfield Union.)

"Local Democrats are disgusted with the convention held in the Court Square Theatre Saturday, and nothing else has been talked about since. While the leading members of the party in this city decline to talk for publication, they say very free in their denunciation of the Bosses' politicians, whom they blame for the riot. Without question, Chicopee will go strong for Guild or Hisgen in the coming election."

Kilkenny Cats Not in It.

(Lewiston, Me., Journal.)

The Massachusetts Democratic convention at Springfield broke into two camps in the same theatre and played vaudeville at both ends of the auditorium. Only the intervention of the police prevented fist encounters by statesmen standing for opposite views, but each in turn shouting for Jefferson and calling for Jackson. The lock-out of Whitney delegates by the Bartlett faction, which holds the party machinery, gives the Whitney faction a favorable presumption, while on the other hand the Bartlett crowd across the Whitney aggregation of fraud and violence. The Kilkenny cats are not in it with the Democratic convention in Massachusetts.

DEMOCRATS OF RHODE ISLAND FOR HIGGINS

War on Braytonism and Republican Boss Rule Convention Keynote To-day.

WETMORE IS DENOUNCED

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—Concentrating its fight on Braytonism and the corruption of public officials for private gain the Democratic party of Rhode Island is to-day sounding through its State convention the keynote of the campaign, in which the candidate for Governor, James H. Higgins, of Pawtucket, will for the second time seek election as Governor.

Leading the forty-one men who saved the honor of the State in the last General Assembly by their fealty to the Goddard candidacy for the Senate, and eulogizing Governor Higgins for his record in his high office, the convention in its platform denounced in the strongest terms the boss system under which the Republican party is and has been lined up in determined opposition to every measure which would tend to undermine the evils under which the State is suffering.

It insists that the destruction of the boss system is the imperative duty of the people of Rhode Island, and declares it the leading issue in the campaign.

It demands that the Legislature restore to the Governor his power of appointment now supported by the Senate. It demands a thorough investigation of the eight-hour day for all State and municipal work, the making of ballots the test of election in elections a penal offence; the creation of the office of bank examiner, and a proper restriction on trust companies.

It denounces the conference for the United States Senate of George Peabody Wetmore, whom it declares to be the most notorious corruptionist of the State, the one man who has done more to strengthen and perpetuate General Charles R. Brayton in power than any other man in the State, and the man who was willing to receive the senatorship by the purchase of Brayton, and pledges the party to the support of Colonel Goddard for the Senate.

Deafening applause greeted every mention of the name of Governor Higgins in the nominating speech by Frank E. Fitzsimmons, chairman of the State Central Committee, the convention received the official endorsement by the Democratic organization of the policy pursued by the Governor the past year.

"The people made no mistake in the choice of a year ago," said Mr. Fitzsimmons.

"In every instance where it was possible to do so the Governor has squared the word with the deed. His nominations imperatively demanded, and we shall be only meeting the expectations of those who sent us here when we present his popular favor Governor James H. Higgins of Pawtucket."

CAPT. BATES TO WAGE HOT CAMPAIGN

Thomas H. Bates, Independence League candidate for Senator in the Eighth Suffolk Senatorial District, has declared that he intended at once to invade the strongholds of his two opponents and wage a constant warfare till election day.

He recently challenged the Republican and Democratic nominees to a joint debate, but has not heard from either of them. He says, however, that the plan of the joint debate will be carried out. He claims the same privilege at their meetings.

Mr. Bates is a large property holder in the district and believes that the taxpayers will serve their own interests best by voting for him. He said to-day:

"I am out for one election so that I may assist in a general cleaning out of every species of political corruption which has lain in the past made politics a means of livelihood, and who have been placed in office and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is merited obliquy before the whole country."

Mr. Bates will commence his campaign within a few days, and will deliver many speeches in Wards 20 and 21.

OFF TO AVENGE HIS SLAIN SON

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Isador Jaffe, a rich manufacturer, is expected back as soon as a steamship can bring him from Havana, to push the prosecution against Policeman Alfred N. Shuttleworth, who killed the tuberculosis patient, Isaac, in Bologa Park, Brooklyn, last night. Jaffe's friends say the officer ingrudged the young man for wrestling with a friend on the grass, arrested him when he made an angry reply, clubbed him without provocation, and deliberately shot him when he tried to escape.

AWARDED $450 IN $16,000 SUIT

TAUNTON, Oct. 8.—A jury in the land damage suit of Silas Crane against the town of Attleboro and the Boston & Providence Railroad Company, returned a verdict here of $450. The plaintiff had claimed $10,000 damages because of the abolition of a grade crossing.

Three grade crossing cases have all been victories for the town, the plaintiffs receiving jury awards of less than one quarter of what they asked.

WHITNEY IN FINISH FIGHT FOR GOVERNOR

DEMOCRATIC CLAIMANT, OUT OF CORPORATIONS, CONTEDS FOR NOMINATION.

Declaring his confidence in a favorable decision at the hands of the Ballot Law Commissioners, who are to determine after a hearing whether Whitney or Bartlett is the real nominee of the Democracy of Massachusetts for Governor, Henry M. Whitney announces that he is in the fight to a finish.

Stirred by the caustic references of United States Senator Lodge to his position in the American Express and Boston & Maine directorates, Mr. Whitney confronted in a talk at Brookline last night, amid the applause of his supporters, that he is now out of both boards. He quit them a few days ago, it seems, because he looked forward with confidence to a nomination at Springfield and regarded his election as a walk-over.

"I am still in the fight," he said amid cheers, "I shall be the next Governor of Massachusetts."

Cong. Sullivan Attacks Kiley.

Aside from Mr. Whitney, Congressman Sullivan was the principal speaker of the evening, and his sarcastic references to the Bartlett forces, coupled with the suggestion that as Daniel J. Kiley had undoubtedly given the nomination to General Bartlett he should be given the vacant place on the ticket, caused great merriment.

"If there is any honor among decent thieves," there is any gratitude among politial highwaymen," said Mr. Sullivan, "then Mr. Kiley should figure in the coming election as the running-mate for General Bartlett. For one day Mr. Kiley was the whole Democratic party and the General ought not to forget that fact."

Mr. Whitney began directly on the Springfield convention. Before he had finished that part he had promised the people to stand to the end and he said: "I will guarantee that the Democratic party will do her duty. She will purge herself from her Kilkers and O'Connells and her George Fred Williamses and her Charles W. Bartletts and come out purified by fire."

Then he spoke on reciprocity and tariff revision, making comments on the recent speech of Senator Lodge at the State convention.

"Mr. Lodge," he said, "is very much worried for fear that I, as a director of the American Express Company, and the Boston & Maine Railroad Company, shall carry my connection with those corporations into the State House. If I should be elected Governor, I take great pleasure in relieving his mind of this dire apprehension. When it became apparent from the result of the caucuses of the Democratic party, I would be nominated, I resigned both positions.

Scores Rap at Senator Lodge.

"He persists in charging me with the responsibility for the merger, when he knows perfectly well that I have denied any responsibility for that movement."

Bloody Williams was in the chair, and among those on the platform who spoke were Ludwig Briggs, Charles S. Hall, Congressman Peters, Congressman Sullivan, former Congressman Corry, Andrew J. Peters, lands and Dr. Cutts.

PEARY'S 'MAN FRIDAY' JAILED

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 8.—Antonio Gomez, a Spaniard, more familiarly known as Tony, who has been the major domo for the household of Commander Robert E. Peary at Eagle Island for six years, and for much of the time the commander's own "Man Friday," was arraigned in the Municipal Court on the charge of intoxication and non-support of his family and sentenced to thirty days in the county jail.

GOLDIE MOHR SECRETLY WED

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Goldie Mohr Wood, widow of Alan W. Wood, the Pittsburg millionaire, has married wealthy Sorden Kingdon of New Rochelle, and they are now on their way to Europe.

Mrs. Kingdon, as Goldie Mohr, was a member of Weber & Fields's theatrical company six years ago. She was married in 1904 to Alan W. Wood of Pittsburg. The marriage was kept secret for a year, and when it was announced in 1905 Mr. Wood's kin at once filed a storm of protest.

Wood died in August, 1905, leaving his widow one-ninth of his estate, or about $1,000,000.

SEEK TO ROUND UP DELEGATES FOR DENNISON

Fear Growing Boom for Moran at Democratic Convention To-night.

CITY HALL SCOUTS BUSY

With the Democratic district attorney convention scheduled for 8 o'clock to-night in Faneuil Hall, emissaries of the City Hall machine are engaged in a desperate effort to round up delegates for Joseph A. Denison as the Democratic nominee. Superintendent of Streets Cline, Doyle, Daly, Cooksley, Dennison's leader in East Boston, and a host of others are busy in the interests of the machine candidate.

Up to last Friday, while there was little enthusiasm for Dennison among the organization leaders in the different wards there were few who cared to go out and work for the candidacy of Dennison and Henry S. Fitzgerald from the State committee from the Hayes district. That day night, when their votes would be needed in the State committee and prevented the Bartlett people from stealing the convention, has changed all that.

Put It Up to Mayor.

In wards previously favorable to Denison there is now a feeling of indifference to him, if not of actual hostility.

"Let the Mayor take care of him," kept him away from Springfield," was the several ward leaders said at city hall to-day. This accounts for the activity Doyle and Cooksey who do not put much faith in the Mayor's professions of interest in Dennison's success.

It looks now as if Kiley, Linehan, O'Connell and the Ward 10 contingent will go to Foran from the start, leave no offers to compromise open for those who bitterly denounced them at Springfield Saturday. Some Dennison leaders are looked to support Moran in return for what they got from the Mayor's retreat last Friday night.

Will Support Moran.

While Moran has declared that he did not desire the nomination of any party, in spite of thirty-nine votes on the first ballot to-night, the votes of the delegates from wards 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 Republican, he will pick up many more votes unless delegations throughout the city in the spectators in the galleries and engage battling hard to give Moran a majority which he has repeatedly stated does not want.

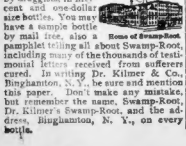
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.



Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Wife of Slain Man Is Witness of Mystery in Trial of Roberts

MRS. ANNIE DICKINSON TO TESTIFY FOR GUIDE IN MAINE TRAGEDY

HOULTON, Me., Oct. 8.—Secretly brought here from her home at Smyrna Mills, Mrs. Annie M. Dickinson is to be one of the most important figures at the second trial of John Roberts, charged with killing Edgar J. Dickinson last October. Mystery surrounds the appearance of Mrs. Dickinson, who, last April, was charged with Jack Roberts with the murder of her husband.

Her presence was known to but few people. Even the prosecuting officers professed not to know that Mrs. Dickinson had arrived. She was not summoned as one of the prosecution's witnesses.

The woman, whose appearance is a sensation in the case, arrived Sunday night, coming over the road from her home in a closed carriage. She was taken at once to a room in the Exchange Hotel, where she has remained in the strictest seclusion. She has not even left the hotel.

Mystery in Woman's Visit.

It is the belief of those closely watching the trial that Counsel Shaw, for Roberts, and who was also Mrs. Dickinson's attorney when she was tried, has planned to put her on the witness stand in behalf of the man charged with killing her husband to offset the State's claim that she was the motive for the murder.

County Attorney Eugene Holmes, opening the case for the Government, said such would be his contention.

"In such cases as this," he said, "there is always a motive. There was a motive in the crime of killing Edgar J. Dickinson. That motive was Mr. Roberts's intimacy with the wife of the dead man. Nothing was noticed until the Summer of 1906. Then there was revealed a condition of affairs that was more or less of a scandal in Smyrna Mills."

Attorney Shaw absolutely refuses to discuss his hand in regard to Mrs. Dickinson. "Will you call her as a witness for Roberts?" he was asked. "That I cannot tell you," he said. "Haven't you brought her here for that purpose?" "Well, now you know I don't want to answer that question."

Known to Hub Hunters.

"But will she be used to refute the contention of the State that she was the motive for the killing of her husband?"

"As yet, I don't know just how Mrs. Dickinson will figure in the case. You will have to wait for further developments."

Mrs. Shaw, however, expressed confidence that the second trial of Roberts, guide and woodsman, known as Ed Dickinson to many Boston hunters, would result in a verdict of acquittal.

The first trial resulted in a disagreement. The State has nothing new," he declared emphatically. "I have. They will be surprised when they see what happens. Roberts and I are going hunting next week. We have made all arrangements."

Roberts has changed wonderfully since he was last brought into court. Then his deep sunken eyes that swept restlessly here and there about the court room were the most noticeable part of his features. To-day they were partially hidden by heavy glasses.

Then his mustache was was close cropped. Now he has allowed it to grow until its long, slender, well groomed ends almost cover his broad jaws.

Roberts Cheerful at Trial.

He has lost none of the nervous interest which he showed before in the manner in which the witnesses were examined. Not a question was asked at the opening of the trial yesterday when prospective jurymen were being questioned that Roberts did not lean far forward, take in every word, and then bringing his jaws together with a snap when that moment's ordeal was over.

Before court opened he was exceedingly cheerful and smiled at the few who recognized him with a nod.

"I am feeling pretty well," he said, "and I will be all right."

He is confident from what he has been told that this trial will see him released from the jail that has been his home for nearly a year now.

His health is fairly good, but he longs constantly for the woods.

The case has lost none of its interest for the curious. The throwing open of the doors sent a hundred women rushing up the gallery stairs anxious for the most advantageous seats. There were inquiries for the Dickinson family, only Perley, the eighteen-year-old son of the dead man, was in court. Jane Dickinson, who refused to testify against either her mother or Jack Roberts at the trial last April has not not been summoned by the State.

Two Hours to Secure Jury.

She has left Smyrna and has been working in Houlton. Perley has been away from home also. Neither did Mrs. Dickinson appear about the courthouse. Something over two hours was spent in securing the jury.

Seventy-three talesmen were called, accepted, excused or challenged before the panel was complete.

Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court Lucilius A. Emery, who is presiding, expressed his wonder that the talesmen should summon from among a body gathered or as having formed an opinion.

He said when the jury was complete and the others dismissed: "In all my twenty-five years' experience I have never had so many men say that they had their minds made up by what they had read or had talked about. I hope I may never hear such statements again."

Justice Emery took occasion in his address to the jury to express his belief that the law which required jurymen shall be kept by themselves during a murder trial was an unnecessary one because it had been outgrown in the progress of events.

Judge Scores Jury Law.

He said to the jury: "I am sorry that you gentlemen who have been unfortunate enough to be chosen for service in this case must be segregated from your fellowmen until the trial is over. There is no help for it; the law requires it.

"I think it is an absurd law, and I wonder that the people stand for it. Your sacrifice is appreciated. If the sheriffs will not go home when you want what you may be allowed to have, come to me.

"I must ask of you not to discuss this case in any way among yourselves when you retire from the courtroom while the trial is in progress."

This trial is to be one of the hardest fought that Maine has ever seen. Attorney-General Hannibal Hamlin is assisting County Attorney Holmes.

Medical Witnesses To-day.

Since the last trial every nook and corner of the county has been scoured for witnesses. No less than sixty-five have been sworn for this hearing—nearly twice the number that were called before. That is the number for the State only; those to be called for the defence number a score or more.

It will probably be Aroostook County's most expensive trial. Attorney-General Hamlin says that the State's case has been strengthened by the new witnesses. In his argument, County Attorney Holmes said that witnesses would show that Perley was only a few miles away from the lickhouse home on Wednesday, the day before Ed Dickinson was killed.

The only witness who has been heard so far is F. H. Coombs of Bangor, civil engineer, who made the plans of the scene of the murder. The medical witnesses, Dr. Dickinson and Dr. Libby, take the stand to-day.

CONVENTION OF THE CATHOLIC Y.M.N.U. OPENS

More Than 1,000 Delegates Gather at Thirty-Third Annual in Newark,

THE ELECTION TO-MORROW

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 8.—Delegates in attendance at the thirty-third annual convention of the Catholic Young Men's National Union marched in a body to-day to St Patrick's Church where they attended a pontifical mass, the celebrant of which was the Rt. Rev. John J. O'Connor, D. D., Bishop of Newark. The sermon was delivered by the Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, D. D., Bishop of Trenton.

Following the mass the delegates assembled in the hall of the Young Men's Catholic Lyceum and were called to order by the Rev. T. J. Leonard of Brooklyn, New York, the president. The various committees were then appointed, after which a recess took place. One thousand delegates are entitled to seats in the convention.

Last evening the local organizations tendered the visitors a reception. The largest delegations here are those from Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn. Many of the delegates are clergymen.

Send Out Appeal for Funds.

This afternoon James H. Fitzgerald of Mechanics Valley, Pa., the secretary-treasurer, will submit his report, which will show a large increase of membership in every subordinate branch in all parts of the country.

He will also announce the fact that the Supreme Council at Rome has made active preparations for the presentation of a chalice to His Holiness Pope Pius X. to be used by him in celebrating the mass on the occasion of his golden jubilee in 1908. He will recommend the appointment of a committee to represent the National Union.

The committees on libraries and textbooks schools have circulated among the delegates an appeal for funds in carrying on the work allotted to them in forwarding plans for where young men may go evenings and receive technical training.

It is expected that before the convention adjourns a substantial sum will be appropriated as a result of this appeal.

At the session to-morrow officers for the ensuing term will be elected. The present roster of the officers include the Rev. T. J. Leonard, Brooklyn, New York, president; the Rev. James J. Murphy, Peabody, Mass., first vice-president; M. S. Flynn, Elizabeth, New Jersey, second vice-president; James H. Fitzgerald, Mechanics Valley, Pa., secretary-treasurer. In the afternoon there will be addresses delivered by many of the clergymen present.

KOREANS PUT TO SWORD BY THE JAPANESE

Shocking Tales of Conquerors' Cruelty to Inhabitants Leak Out.

NO MERCY IS SHOWN

HONGKONG, Oct. 8.—Shocking stories are beginning to leak out concerning the cruelties the Japanese are perpetrating in Korea in the effort to restore peace among the inhabitants of the Mikado's new dependency.

There is no doubt of the truth of the reports that General Hasegawa has issued a proclamation which, while promising pardon to those who lay down their arms at once, threatens vengeance not only against those who commit further acts of violence, but pledges himself to exterminate their families as well.

The number of victims of Japanese retaliation for attacks by the rebellious Koreans is estimated all the way from 10,000 to 20,000. Many of these have been killed in open fights, but enormous numbers have literally been massacred.

In hundreds of cases, where Japanese have suffered violence at the natives' hands mere suspects have been mercilessly put to the sword, hanged or shot down in groups without even the formality of trials.

The Japanese military authorities are making no particular secret of the fact that they are being driven to extremes. They say they have no choice but to resort to the most severe measures or be driven from the country.

In Seoul, where the Japanese garrison numbers about 10,000, the natives' violence takes the form mainly of assassination, rioting has been suppressed, but in the country districts scarcely a day passes that reports are not received from some district of such violence.

MOB FATALLY BEATS MANIAC WHO SLEW MAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In the midst of a crowd that sought to prevent him, in his maniacal fury, from killing pedestrians, Charles Hanly, a stalwart negro, did, this evening, at Exchange place and Broadway, buried himself upon William F. Daniels and with one blow of a hoe-edged hatchet practically severed the man's head from his body.

Men and boys with bricks and stones attacked the slayer. They threw him to the ground, trampled upon him, twisted several of his joints out of place, broke his left leg and probably inflicted fatal injuries on his head.

Knorr, presumably, was a carpenter, for the axe he carried was one used by members of that trade. The dead man was a watchman.

OFFERS QUINCY $15,000 FOR LIQUOR RIGHTS

Declaring that thirteen Boston and Quincy express companies have formed a combination to monopolize the business of transporting liquor from Boston to Quincy consumers, Amos E. Devito, a wealthy Quincy expressman, in a communication to the Quincy Common Council, has offered to give $15,000 to the city treasury if he be granted a special liquor express license.

According to Mr. Devito, a large Boston liquor dealer is back of the alleged monopoly, and not long ago offered to give the City of Quincy $12,000 for special liquor traffic favors.

In his communication Mr. Devito said: "Something must be done to break this monopoly, and if a liquor license is granted I can afford to maintain a combination, I stand ready to pay $15,000 immediately to free Quincy from the grasp of the 'Express Trust.'"

40,000 SEE OPENING OF FOOD FAIR

Nearly 40,000 people attended the opening of the New England Food Fair at the Mechanics Building and to-day greater crowds are expected. Members of the Massachusetts and Suburban press associations and guests were given a private view of the exhibits and heard an address by Governor Guild. The fair is given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers and Provision Dealers' Association and is managed by C. H. Green and E. J. Rowe of New York.

Last night there were formal exercises, opened by prayer by Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad. There were addresses by President Frederick Humphrey of the grocers' association, Speaker Cole of the House of Representatives, Mayor Fitzgerald, President Adams of the State Board of Trade and Assistant United States District Attorney Guy A. Ham.

The fair promises to be the best and most unique ever held in Boston. Each exhibitor has managed to appeal to the women who will visit the fair in hundreds and the exhibit which will be doubtless attract the greatest number of them will be the mammoth "cylon tea exhibition. This takes up the entire stage in Paul Revere hall. It is the largest thing of its kind which has ever been attempted and numbers of silver Hindoos have been brought from Ceylon.

The tea is made in a peculiar shaped china pot and no less a person than the Earl of Dundonald, who was at one time commander-in-chief of the forces in Canada, was its inventor. The object of Lipton's to have a sufficient quantity of the pots on hand by the end of the week to supply all the women who are desirous of purchasing them. One great advantage of this tea pot is that it has two separate compartments. The tea is placed in one and the water in the other and then after it has steeped five minutes the tea pot is turned upside down and result is a beverage free from the slightest trace of tannin.

There are about fifty little tables scattered about the stage and 100 people can be served at one time. The tea will be free, as will also a moving picture exhibit under the management of this same company. Dulane, Potter & Co. They have engaged the services of W. A. Courtney, special government commissioner from the Island of Ceylon, to lecture on the mode of life of the natives of the island. L. Belling and Captain C. F. Shinn are in charge of the exhibit.

As all women are natural lovers of the home, the model cottage, which is the first thing to be seen on entering the hall, will doubtless prove a great attraction. One of the advantages of this kind of a home is, that it can be packed up and carried "wherever you may roam." It comprises four rooms and has a porch in the back which looks most attractive with the bright red and white striped awning.

The interior is most artistically arranged, colored curtains being hung from the windows, while Morris chairs and divans, which can be transformed into beds, add much to the comfort of the place.

HARVARD WELCOMES 200 GERMAN DELEGATES

President Eliot and Other University Leaders Acknowledge Great Debt America Owes to the Fatherland.

9:40 and entered the main gate of the enclosure. Mr. Hearst had preceded the party to the university and met them as they entered the Germanic Museum.

After the inspection of Harvard the delegates returned by special trolley cars to the Hotel Westminster for luncheon, where they are welcomed by Governor Guild for the State and by Mayor Fitzgerald for the city of Boston. Later they return to New York by special train to Fall River and thence by steamer.

On the way to Boston last night on the Puritan the delegates enjoyed a German smoker and Mr. Hearst was one of the speakers.

GERMAN KEYNOTE IN HEARST TOAST

The keynote of the National German-American Alliance pilgrimage to Boston was struck last night in the toast which William Randolph Hearst, the host of the delegation, offered at a kommers on board the steamer Puritan.

Mr. Hearst's linking of George Washington and Frederick the Great was a happy inspiration. The delegates, or "pilgrims, as they now call themselves, in the excursion being over, were still talking about it this morning when they reached Boston from Fall River.

This is the toast that brought the Teutonic guests to their feet in a common movement, and gave to the night's affair "prosit" left them cheering with empty glasses.

"Here is to George Washington and Frederick the Great, loyal to the fatherland, Emperor and the President of the United States, to the people of Germany and the people of the United States. Rulers come and go, but the people remain.

"The German kommers, or smoker, at which Mr. Hearst spoke, was a unique affair. On the deck of the huge Fall River liner a temporary banquet hall was arranged, on the walls of which were great American and German flags, alternating. Over four long tables decorated with beer steins, and there were seats for the 220 delegates and wives and daughters. Mr. Hearst's generous invitation to visit the American center of learning at Cambridge was found at Harvard. At the forward end of this seething hall the ship's orchestra was stationed, while from the gangway came the smoke and other material which made the kommers typical.

The Rev. Dr. Julius Hoffmann of John Hopkins University, Baltimore, presided from a table amidships, with Mr. Hearst and Adolph A. Hemmeter, president of the National Alliance on his left. His introductory remarks, in the line of the toast, smacked with wit and humor from the line he complimented the first speaker on his brevity until he reached the last, he has suggested that all remain where they were until the hour landed.

In introducing Mr. Hearst Dr. Hoffmann said:

"We are on board an American ship, and naturally our hearts turn to this beloved land of our adoption, the land of our children, our duty. America, the appreciate the hospitality of the Puritan and may not the very name stand for the spirit of purity in politics personified in the gentleman on my left? Mr. Hearst, the importance of the body and in his action has won a stronger German-American alliance, invited you to enjoy this pilgrimage. In the name of those who will be welcomed by us in this city and the United States, rulers come and go, but the people remain.

"This evidence of friendship is of the greatest significance and meets with hearty and heartfelt response from all American citizens, regardless of their origin. Of all the nations of the earth there are no two that have greater reason for friendship, for mutual regard and respect, than America and Germany.

"This country owes much to Germany which it does not hesitate to gratefully acknowledge.

"In our struggle for independence no friend of the American cause did more to aid them than Steuben. He introduced in our armies something of the discipline of the system, the organization which had carried the eagles of the Great Frederick to victory everywhere.

Must Remain Friends.

"In the growth and development and upbuilding of this country Germans have always played a leading part; but if there were no influences from the past, no other reason than those I have given, the fact that so many of our brothers in citizenship are of German birth should make it absolutely necessary that Germany and the United States should be forever in harmony and friendship.

"I know the sentiments of our National's history which we read as children, we know the Germans as our fellow citizens, and, knowing them and honoring them, we eagerly stretch forth our hands from one to the other, to grasp their hands held forth in fellowship.

"Great nations have great heroes, and the utmost guidance for a people's course is found in the following, for instance, examples which those heroes leave to us.

Washington and Frederick.

"In all history there are no men more worthy of the nation's honor, more fitted through genius and patriotism to direct a nation's destinies than George Washington and Frederick the Great.

"These two great friends. Frederick the Great called Washington the greatest general of his age, and only Frederick the Great could afford to pay so graceful a compliment, for he was a title that he himself had won and worn without dispute or cloud of question.

"My friends, let us follow to-day and forever the examples so set by these two great nations, and let us proceed as nearly as may be on the lines followed by them. Between the two nations, which agrees, that there shall be a firm, inviolable and unbroken peace and friendship between the King of Prussia, his heirs, successors and subjects on the one part, and the United States of America, without exception of persons or places.

"It seems to me that all American citizens should stand true to this now and always, to carry out that clause of that treaty as they were on the day on which it was written.

"I rejoice heartily in favor of the most close and cordial relations between Germany and the United States, and enthusiastic in support of all measures that will promote such relations.

Toast to Emperor.

"I am particularly happy to be able to unite with you on this occasion in expressing the gratification we all feel at the generous and friendly act of Emperor William of Germany.

"And, my friends, I give you a toast.

"Here is George Washington and Frederick the Great.

"Here is to the Emperor of Germany and the President of the United States.

"Here is to the people of Germany and the people of the United States.

"Rulers come and go, but the people abide.

"May these two great peoples ever be friends, may their hearts ever be united, wide enough to express in their acts the friendship which the people feel in their hearts."

Called for Concerted Action.

The first speaker at the "Kommers" was Theodore Kemlinger, president of the United Singing Societies of New York, who spoke of the praiseworthiness of concerted action. He pointed out that the dissension between certain of the New York German societies had been wiped out by the coming of the national convention.

The banks of the delegates were conversed to Mr. Hearst in a neatly turned speech by S. S. Sanger, of Brooklyn, calling attention to the number of wives among the board the

"You wives didn't come to escort and watch over your husbands.

"You really came to meet Mr. Hearst and enjoy this excursion." He concluded by congratulating in fine language the National German-American Alliance, and hope he will continue to interest himself in German-American affairs."

Mr. Sanger's parting toast was to "Wives, Present and to Come."

Dr. E. Schneider of Hoboken, the editor of a German technical paper, was most enthusiastic.

"The two men I most admire," he said, "are Emperor William and William R. Hearst. They both had English fathers, both are impulsive and often misunderstood. I bet their acts always turn out for the best."

World's Debt to Germany.

President Hemmeter, in a brief but scholarly address, reviewed the world's debt to Germany as a civilizing and strengthening influence. He compared Germany to Greece, stating that the Teutonic contribution was the greater in that it did not carry with it the immorality and vices of the ancient Greeks.

The nations of the earth have been regenerated by the strength and character of the Germanic nations. Backed by the noble civilization of 2,000 years, Germany is ready to impart to America what it may of a culture which will exalt that of any other nation.

We German-Americans give to America the purest and best example of family life, and that is giving a great deal. I am glad to greet such a man as Mr. Hearst, who has the genius and common sense to see what we are and what we mean to the country. I thank him for what he has done and what he is willing to do in the future.

Among the humorous speakers were Henry Faulkner, Independence League candidate for judge; Miller Outcault, the cartoonist and W. Fricke.

The singing of the "Kommers" were the enthusiastic German choruses, directed by Professor Heinrich Zoellner, of the Arion Singing Society of New York, and Professor Carl Bamberger, of the National Alliance. The Rev. W. Johannsen, president of the United Singers' Society, was the Trumpeter of Sweet. The hit of the evening was Mrs. Coleman's rendering of the song of the Hearst pilgrimage in Harvard, written by Professor Bamberger and sung to the melody of an old German student song. It was given with such fervor that the crowd came to an end. Only the fact that breakfast was to be served at Harvard at 6:30 o'clock prevented a longer session.

GERMAN ALLIANCE STRONGLY FAVORS 'PERSONAL ALLIANCE'

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In addition to the 230 delegates from various parts of the country representing the alliance and a half dozen members of the National German American Alliance, hundreds of Germans from Greater New York and surrounding cities gathered in New York to-day to welcome the first of the first permanent settlers at Philadelphia. During the morning the last pledges of American patriotism and concord were given by the Germans who received.

The delegates have been most interested in the drastic declarations for personal liberty and against prohibitive legislation which were adopted yesterday. One of the declarations there was a sharp criticism of the Civil Service Methods of employment in regard to Vice-President Fairbanks. This propaganda is declared to be the second principle of the separation of Church and State, and the third, of non-interference in the political affairs of the country."

To Reestablish Canteens.

The re-establishment of the canteen in the army and the soldiers' homes was strongly advocated. Much attention was given by the report of the committee on historical investigation, and it is likely that the alliance will employ a salaried historian to prepare a text book which will set forth the part Germans have played in the life of the country. It was recommended that local historical societies be established in every community which has a large German population, to gather statistics regarding the progress of the race.

The Alliance decided to join the International Alliance, which has head quarters in Berne, and it gives financial aid to the German American Normal School at Milwaukee. A proposition to erect a monumental field at the Valley Forge was referred to a special committee.

Millions Send Greetings.

The principal address was made by Dr. Hexamer of Philadelphia, the president of the National German-American Alliance, who declared that he brought the greetings of millions of Americans of German birth or extraction.

He said he traced the history of the Germans in America. He referred in detail to those who rallied as defenders of the soil and their devotion to the cause of freedom. He told of the timed loyalty which the Germans formed for the revolutionary war and referred to men like Baron De Kolb and Baron Von Steuben, to whose memory America must ever bow her head.

Equally stirring was his recital of the part the Germans took in the Civil War. He declared that the Germans voted for the union and 200,000 of their brothers served in the armies of the North.

"TRUST WANTS CHEAP MILK," CRIES FARMER

George Albree Charges Standardization Law Is Not Enforced.

The Boston milk contractors want a "cheap milk to sell profitably," declared George Albree of Concord, retired producer, to a mass meeting of Worcester County milk producers who are fighting the Boston Milk Trust.

"I spent a large amount of money to have a model farm. I raised very rich milk and offered it to the contractors in Boston. They said they did not want my milk; that it was too rich for them. Boston really wanted was a cheap milk to sell readily.

"Somebody is being benefitted through the non-enforcement of the so-called statute in regard to the standards of milk. If the existing statutes were actually enforced, fully 50 per cent. of the producers of Worcester County would be prosecuted."

Plan Hub Invasion.

Unless the Boston contractors agree to pay them 3c cents a can for their milk, the Worcester County producers threaten to invade the Boston market on their own hook. They have appointed a committee representing 300 producers, which is empowered to treat with the contractors. If its negotiations fail, the committee is authorized to arrange to sell Worcester milk at wholesale in Boston 10 per cent. cheaper than the Boston contractors are selling.

The Worcester men declare that such a move would break the price of milk to the consumer in Boston, because they do have from 15,000 to 20,000 cans of milk, about 322,000 gallons.

They declare that they cannot produce milk at a profit at 2½c cents a can, the price the Boston contractors will pay them until November 1, and which they will accept until that time.

Calls Contractors Tyrants.

Charles W. Wood of Shrewsbury, who was chairman of their mass-meeting at Worcester to arrange for the meeting of the committee to deal with the contractors, said:

"You must hang together or you will hang separately. You must break away from this band of petty tyrants (the contractors). It costs 43 cents to produce a can of milk. And you are selling away at half quart with every can."

Charles A. Converse is the father of the plan to appeal to Governor Guild. This plan was also endorsed by the Worcester producers. He said:

The State Agricultural Department, the State Dairy Bureau, the State Board of Health Department, slumber as it may seem, are all antagonistic to the milk producer."

INSURANCE UNION MEN ASK MORAN'S AID

Charge Officials of Companies with Blacklisting Agents in Their Employ.

Charging that officials of the big life insurance companies are blacklisting agents in their employ because they are members of the recently organized union, two local agents have called on District Attorney Moran to take action.

According to one of the men who called at the public prosecutor's office, indictment Clerk Isaacs promised that a investigation of their charges would be made.

Numerous Complaints Made.

From all over the country come complaints by insurance canvassers to the effect that they are being forced to withdraw from the union or throw up their jobs.

The following letter written to National Secretary J. D. Williams, by the president of the New Bedford local, after that union had disbanded, illustrates the charges made by the agents.

"New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 8, 1907.

"Dear Mr. Williams:

"I write you to-day to write you on the turn of affairs here. A few weeks ago the agents were called into the superintendent's office for the purpose of signing a statement declaring that the organization was detrimental to the field force. Every agent belonging to the union signed that statement, with the exception of myself, so I came to the conclusion that, as far as I was concerned in the field, or even those in the local, I would resign my position as president.

"Then they got together and openly stated that they would discharge all those who openly might think that my action was done in haste, but such was not the case. Weighing everything that has transpired since the organization of the association brought me to the action that I took.

Threatens Union Men.

"Hoping that you will never feel that my spirit and feelings have changed in regard to being a union man, inclosed you will find a copy of the minutes of the last meeting. Wishing you all the success possible, and let me know if you have received the money from this organization, as was passed at the meeting. I remain, yours truly,

"CHARLES HARNEY."

The superintendent of the company's Boston office is also accused of threatening to discharge agents for joining or belonging to the organization.

FULL DINNER PAIL BOOSTS BOARD RATES

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 9.—The "full dinner pail" of West Springfield railway trainmen has resulted in a boost of prices by the Boarding House Keepers' Union from $5 to $6 per week.

"I don't wonder that the Boston & Albany trains are late," one of the boarding mistresses said to-day to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, "and after seeing one of these dinner pails you will wonder how anybody can get to work. The average man would want to sleep for an hour after getting away with a train man's meal.

Object to Size of Pail.

Mrs. Charles D. Clark, Jr., organized the movement. Seventeen other women have joined her.

"Yes," said Mrs. Clark, "the increased cost of living has been something to do with it, of course, but not so much as the dinner pail. Ever see one of them? Gee Whiz!"

The lady returned with what looked like a combination bath tub and wash boiler, and in the following apartment to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"Well, said the reporter, "when you load that up once you go through with the border for a day. Where's the kick?

150 to 200 Affected.

"What Mrs. Clark want to know. "This is one meal, and some of the men have the nerve to complain that the high cost of tin has lately restricted the size of pails. Why, Mr., you women's union has had his three regular meals at the house if he ordered out for a night job we have to fill this for him.

"Between 150 and 200 trainmen are affected by the new schedule.

"I don't like it," to say the women of West Springfield, "they can go somewhere else."

LAWYERS FAIL TO SHAKE HANDS WITH BARTLETT

PITTSFIELD, Oct. 8.—Thirty-nine Berkshire County lawyers, at an impromptu reception at the courthouse, refused to shake hands with Governor Charles W. Bartlett, who is in town to-day as counsel in the Bemis divorce case.

Patrick J. Moore was the only one to grasp the hand of the man whom the Kiley convention at Springfield named as Democratic candidate for Governor.

Governor Bartlett's impromptu reception was tendered him after the close of the court, when there were some forty attorneys present, but Moore was the only one who extended him cordiality.

Yesterday was one of the hardest that Candidate Bartlett has put in in many days. He arrived from Springfield early Sunday morning, went to the Wendell avenue church service, together with the mishap to the machine which will keep him in the case of considerable delay. He had planned to leave for home for a rest, but the postponing of the divorce case made it necessary for him to remain in town.

The woman fell into his arms with such force that both were thrown to the sidewalk. The woman, Mary Brockell, was uninjured.

BRIDE FAINTS AT THE ALTAR RAIL

WORCESTER, Oct. 8.—At St. Casimir's Lithuanian Catholic Church, during a triple wedding in honor of Joseph Zukavic, the officiating clergyman, was asking the usual questions, one of the brides broke down and went into hysterics, after which she fainted. Upon being resuscitated by the priest and encouraged by her sister brides, she succeeded in saying a faint yes to the question.

RENOUNCE OLD PARTIES AND JOIN LEAGUE

Old-Time Democrat and Republican Leaders Flock to Hisgen Banner.

HALT POLITICAL SUICIDE

The renouncing of old party ties and the adoption of the Independence League principles by many leading Republicans and Democrats were the features of a rally held in the interests of Thomas L. Hisgen, the Independence League candidate for governor, which was held in the Prescott Schoolhouse, and all Somerville is to-day talking about "Fish Tom" Hisgen.

Walter C. Smith, a lifelong Republican, was one of the first to adopt the new party and in a short speech said:

"I have always voted the Republican ticket, but have decided to support the platform and principles of the Independence League. I not only intend to support the party candidates myself, but will use every effort to have my friends do likewise.

"The law gives me the right to commit the crime of assault to prevent a man from committing bodily harm. I, therefore, feel that I can use the same measures to prevent a man from committing political suicide in voting for old parties."

The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic and the big school hall was taxed to its utmost capacity. Charles E. Butterworth presided and among the speakers introduced were Thomas H. Hastes, Senatorial candidate in the Eighth Suffolk District, on the Independence League ticket; George L. Goodale, 2nd, Senatorial candidate in the Third Middlesex District; Edwin H. Marks and Charles E. Butterworth, who are candidate for Representative from Somerville, all on the League ticket.

Praise League Leaders.

Captain Bates said:

"The Independence League is the beginning of a movement which will spread to a national one. At the head of our party we have honest, reliable men—men who stand for the principles of the Independence League.

"To support him in his long fight on Standard Oil Mr. Hisgen must have many friends, and at election they will give him their support."

George E. Goodale said in part: "Working men cannot to be too careful. I have seen bars snarling left entirely unprotected in large cotton mills, where men carrying cotton into can the danger of having the bars fall on top of them.

Hisgen and Brown to Speak.

"If I am elected I intend to protect the rights of the working man, and in so doing will uphold the platform of the Independence League."

At the close of the meeting a resolution was passed by the city committee to hold a Mc rally in the near future. Ten fellowing speakers have consented to be present: Thomas L. Hisgen, E. Gerry Brown and other leaders of the Independence League.

VICTORY FOR LEAGUE IS PREDICTED

Independent Voters in New York Rebel Against Machine Bound "Bartlett Pair."

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—From every quarter of the State there have come to Independence League headquarters predictions of victory for John T. McDonough and Reuben Robie Lyon, the League candidates for justices of the Court of Appeals.

Independent Republicans and Democrats by the tens of thousands were reported to be in rebellion against the machine-bound "Bartlett pair," while labor organization leaders prophesied that at least 250,000 members of the State Workingmen's Federation would, to a man, heartily support and vote for the League nominees.

Greater New York Independence Leaguers united in statements that the nominations would give the unbossed judiciary candidates a splendid majority and that the prospects for the election of League county and local judiciary nominees here are said propitious.

Timothy Healy, president of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, who has just been on a tour of the State, called at Independence League headquarters to submit a report of his observations.

"The nominations of John T. McDonough and Reuben Robie Lyon for justices of the Court of Appeals," he said, "have enthused the labor organizations and independent voters of the State, as have no other nominations made for judicial offices in many years.

"For the first time the State Workingmen's Federation, comprising nearly 400,000 Democrats, has taken an offensive in politics and the organization will support the League ticket with delight.

"Mr. Lyon we know to be a fine lawyer and fit to adorn any place of honor. We know John T. McDonough better. There is no man in the State who has proved a more ardent champion of the workingman and his rights. He has been in the forefront in every movement intended to better the condition of the wage earner."

LODGE CALLED BEFORE GRAND JURY MONDAY

Because of his speech before the Republican State convention, in which he declared that one of the only two real issues before the people of Massachusetts is the present administration of Boston, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge has been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury next Monday, to tell what he knows of municipal corruption in this city. District Attorney John B. Moran, who is responsible for having summoned Senator Lodge before the Grand Jury, says that "the language used by Senator Lodge at the Republican convention indicates knowledge on his part of violations of the law at City Hall."

CHAPTER II.

"WHEN you were here at the launching of the Vigilante," said Mrs. Lodgersmith, "you may have seen three other ships on the ways. They were the first, with the Vigilante, that we had undertaken in steel construction.

"In material, equipment and labor we had searched the markets for the very best. In fact I figured on actually investing in the ships, just for the sake of advertisement, about $20,000 each. So you see our bid was 'way low.

"We put our heart and soul into these ships and treated everybody fair, paid good wages, and we all worked together.

"The Vigilante was first off the ways. You remember that she beat our contracted speed and was accepted.

"The next week we launched our second steel ship, the Esmeralda." She was a little cargo boat designed for transatlantic trade. She was a success. We were so proud of her that we gave bonuses to every man on the job.

"After she was on her way to her owners in Norway, with a big cargo of case oil, we launched the Alexis I. And Alexis II.

He paused and dropping into his chair looked at me almost defiantly.

"Now I want you to understand, young man," he said, "that there wasn't no better boats ever built than them three crafts. I went through them every day and watched them coming up. There ain't no better men anywhere in the country than I have here in this yard. And I wouldn't discharge one of them, for I know they are just as honest about this thing as we are."

I nodded, and after wailing a little while for the declaration to take effect he continued:

"Well, the Esmeralda started as I say for Norway. We watched the papers for her to see her reported, and the men in the yard had made up an auction pool on her arrival. Mr. Howard and I thought it would be a good idea to encourage the men, so we doubled the pool, making it something like $200. You know what an auction pool is? You bid for the likeliest date on arrival. I had the bidding for the likeliest date was strong and high.

"The days passed and she wasn't heard from at all. We began to get uneasy and inquired of Lloyd's, where she was insured, if they hadn't made a mistake. They tried to get some word of her but they couldn't locate her. She was spoken off the coast of Scotland and that was the last known of her.

Alexis I.

"Alexis I. was the next to leave the ways. She was built for the South African trade. She was launched only a few days after the Esmeralda was on her way home. She was thoroughly inspected before she left. She got home in fine time and left with a cargo for Australia. She never reached her port.

"Alexis II. came next, and she was on her way about a week after her sister ship, Alexis I. She took a cargo to Morocco and left there for Liverpool. Somewhere off the Canaries she disappeared.

"Were the crews lost?" I asked.

"No," he said, "I was coming to that. Every man of every crew was reached. They seemed to have had plenty of time to get their boats out and to get away with provisions. Somehow what they say, in every case the boats went down by the head when they left their decks."

"Were the insurances paid?"

No Insurance

"Yes," he said promptly, "but after the Alexis II. sank the underwriters served notices that our ships would not be insured in the future. That is why I sold mine. Now you can see what that notice means to us. It means simply that all of our new equipment for handling steel has got to be sold for no one will give us an order to build ships that cannot be insured.

"We don't feel like fighting the underwriters, because our steel hulls are unsafe and we know it. But why they are, I'm to give $10,000 cash to know!"

"Are you sure there is no competitor working against you?"

He looked at me quickly.

"We've thought of that too," he said slowly. "Since we received an offer from a certain big corporation offering to take over our plant as part of a trust in steel hull construction."

"Who did you get the offer?"

"Just after we were posted by the underwriters," he replied. "We kind o' thought they had a hand in that too. We were rather glad to get the offer for it showed us a way out of the cost of our equipment, anyway."

WORKERS STRIKE TRUCE

The Hutchins-Votey Organ Company of Cambridge has agreed to grant the 55-hour work week to the members of Church Organ Workers' Union who struck May 22. But two of the five firms struck are still holding out against the union.

Union officials held a conference with one of these builders to-day, and the prospects look bright for a favorable settlement.

A smoke-talk for the benefit of the striking organ workers still will be held Thursday night at Wells Memorial building.

MAGNOLIA FIRE PROBE TO-DAY

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 8.—There appears to be no tangible clue as to the cause of the fire which wrought such havoc to the new Magnolia Hotel at Magnolia Saturday morning.

It is certain that the State police will institute an investigation to-day when Deputy Fire Marshal Frank H. Rice arrives. About two years ago, a small mysterious blaze was discovered in the rear of the building, but was found in time before damage resulted. An inquiry failed to reveal anything which would fasten the crime on anyone.

Dorothy Dix Tells of the Girl Who Got Left by Forever Trying to Do Just as Men Told Her, in the Fourth of the

Parables of the Five Foolish Virgins

By Dorothy Dix

THIS is the parable of the Fourth Foolish Virgin:

Now, in the land of the Jays and Reubens there dwelt a certain Maiden, fair of face and form and good to look upon, and of such a Trusting Disposition that she believed all that she was Told, especially when the Teller was a Man, for this Foolish Virgin had It Doped out that when a Masculine Creature, with a Forty-inch-chest Expansion and a Private Opinion that he knew It All, took the Floor, and began to Explain how the Universe Should Be Run, he was handing out large Chunks of Wisdom.

Also, she figured it out that she was Getting Next, for she was she counted on making a Matrimonial Winning was by finding out what Men Really Admired in a Woman and Being It.

So whenever she heard a man begin to discourse on his favorite Subject she became a Rapt Audience, that begged for More.

Tries Culture Plan

Now, it came to pass that among the Young Men who hung around the Foolish Virgin, for she was in truth a Peacherine, was one Goodly Youth with a Lofty Forehead and Serious Views of Life.

Somehow he started the conflagration with Little Silly's heart, and he Listened with Great Assiduity when he Discoursed on Where Women Fall Down and Why.

"The trouble with your Sex," said he with the Knobby Brow, "is that it is Frivolous. You do not sufficiently Regard the Soul of Things, and your Conversation wearies me because it is Mere Ephemeral Chatter, instead of a Profound Delving into the Great Philosophy of Existence.

"When do you find a Girl who prefers Nietzsche to Marie Corelli, or who would not rather go to see Maude Adams play than an Ibsen Drama? And how can women, who are mere Butterflies, expect to become Soul Companions to a Thinking Man."

"It is clear," said the Foolish Virgin to herself, when Solomon had ceased speaking, "that what Intelligent Men admire in Women is Deep Learning, so here is where I get Busy with the Study Class, so that when I run up against the mighty Masculine Intellect I may be able to plug in any line of Talk that is Used."

So the Foolish Virgin burnt the Midnight Oil reading Things she Hated, and learned all the Polite Bunk there is afloat in Art, and Technique in Music, and how to Refer to the Symbolism of things that looked Tommy Rot to her; and People began to look askance at her for a Bore and Intellectual she had Become.

But, strange to say, the Man with the Double Action Thinker, who had Yearned for the Society of a Woman capable of entering into his Conversational Class, never happened around to Call, but stayed in his house any more, as had been his wont, although she had Especially Fitted herself to play Ball with him.

Instead, he spent his time Hotfooting after a Fluffy Haired Peroxide, whose Intellectual Repertoire consisted of giggles and asking him, "Who's Dying to See?"

Next Dresses "Rationally"

The next Man at whose feet the Foolish Virgin sat and absorbed Words of Wisdom was an Immaculately Dressed Gentleman who was turned out by Poole, the Tailor and Haberdasher himself, but who was a Rooter for the Simple Life and Rational Costume for Women.

"What I deplore," said this Noble Reformer, "is the Time and Money women spend in adorning themselves and the Slaves they are to Fashion. So doubt they think, poor Creatures, that Men admire Fine Feathers, but it simply makes a Dress Reform. "She's all to the Good in Thoughtful Man's Shudder to complain to Mary Ways, but you don't catch me out with a Woman who isn't a Good Looker, for it makes all the other Women Turn to her if they can get Any Hints from her Hooking Up or Dressing.

"There's nothing so Attractive as Naturalness, and I long to meet with a Woman with enough Traits and Brains to be as Nature Made Her, and who has Sufficient Intelligence to see my Loose Garments that Hang from the Shoulders, and Shoes with Low Heels and Broad Toes.

"This is Too Easy," murmured the Foolish Virgin to herself, as she Bade Farewell from a Child to Measure up to his Ideal of Feminine Perfection, and fix the fuzzy lady who gets this Plum, sure.

Thereupon she threw away her Toilette Helps, and quit Marcelling her Hair, and appeared in Public in a Health Garment that looked like the Understudy of a Mother Hubbard, but to her Surprise although he for whom the Foolish Virgin had sacrificed her Good Clothes occasionally came to see her, he Never Invited her out to Theatres and Restaurants or to Ride in his Automobile.

Man Deserted Her

"Why is this?" asked his friends, "for she appears to us to be an Attractive Young Lady excepting for the Sloppy Way she dresses."

"That Is It," replied the Rooter for Common Sense in Dress, "She's all right Thoughtful Man wouldn't be complaining with a Woman who isn't a Good Looker, who makes all the other Women Turn to her if they can get Any Hints from her Hooking Up or Dressing.

"No Rag Bag and Feather Bed Figures for Mine."

Finally Failed Also

Finally there came along a man whose Feminine Ideal was the Womanly Woman who was all Clinging Gentleness and Faithfulness, and whose Heart was so Big it had crowded out Brains and Judgment and Spine.

"The chiefest charm of Woman," said this Oracle, "is the ability to Love. No Man is Good Enough for a Girl that Is Noble and Tender in him to know that She Is a Woman's Unending Affections, and the Mere Fact that she is Dependent on him for her Happiness constitutes a claim on him so strong that nothing can Break it, and that a woman took to a Man's Heart by Storm is for him to show him that she cares for him, and that she cannot live without him.

Gush Failed Also

"A Tip to the Wise is sufficient," said the Foolish Virgin, and as she was indeed Hard Hit by the Attentions of the Special Agent for the Feminine Female, she began to Chase him Down.

She thought up some kind of entertainment for seven evenings a week to which to Invite him.

She wrote him thirty-six-page Letters without waiting for him to answer.

She called him up on the Telephone so often she almost Lost him his Job, and she Burst into Tears every time he Looked Sideways at Another Girl.

Unfortunately, however, the over-ripe Peach system of winning a man's Love did not seem to work out in Real Life as it Does in Theory, and the Preserved Youth fled from the Woman who was Determined to Marry him to time who Vowed and Declared that she wouldn't have Him if he was the Last Man on Earth.

Again the Foolish Virgin, "I perceive that Men do not know what they Admire in Women, and had got back for Him as they tell you the further you get Left."

The moral of this parable teaches us that men's theories about women seldom square with their practices.

DON'T PAY ANY ATTENTION TO THOSE FELLOWS
YOU'RE MY AFFINITY
AW QUIT YOU'RE KIDDING, BOYS
PRAY ACCEPT THESE BE MINE!
THIS IS THE WAY MEN ACT WHEN I TRY TO PLEASE THEM!
JOHNSON

This foolish virgin tried to win a husband by the "culture plan," by the "simple life" route, and by the "head-over-heels-in-love" system. Each failed, and the girl who didn't have any theories got all the attention.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER II.—Continued

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THERE was a new atmosphere—a more congenial atmosphere. The night had come, and had brought a change and relief to the face of people to the earth—a reve that lived and worked by night, with whom Archie felt akin.

He did not hate them as he was unconsciously growing to hate the people of the daylight. He saw a large hotel-runner, doubling up before the counter, with all kinds of trinkets were huddled, Archie felt akin. Others, with cards declaring that the price had just been reduced.

The girls behind the counters, all of whom were dressed in a certain extravagant imitation of the women who came every day to look those articles over, were already tired: their eyes lay in dark circles that were the more pronounced because their cheeks were covered with powder, and now and then they lifted their hands, their highly polished fingernails gleaming, to the enormous pompadours in which they had arranged their hair.

Many of the women in the store, clerks and shoppers, were peevish, discontented expressions and spoke in high, ugly voices the noise of their haggling filled the whole room and added to the din made by the little metal money boxes that whizzed by on overhead wires, and increased the general confusion produced by the cheap and useless things which, with their untruthful placards, were piled about everywhere.

The air in the store was foul and unwholesome, and there was little color in the pale faces of the people who carried bundles in baskets ran about and Falmouth streets, the busiest, most distracting corner in the city.

There the enormous department store of James E. Bills & Co. occupied an entire building five stories high. The store was already filled with shoppers, mostly women, who crowded about the counters, on which they dawdled up to look those articles over, were already tired: their eyes lay in dark circles that were the more pronounced because their cheeks were covered with powder, and now and then they lifted their hands, their highly polished fingernails gleaming, to the enormous pompadours in which they had arranged their hair.

Many of the women in the store, clerks and shoppers, were peevish, discontented expressions and spoke in high, ugly voices the noise of their haggling filled the whole room and added to the din made by the little metal money boxes that whizzed by on overhead wires, and increased the general confusion produced by the cheap and useless things which, with their untruthful placards, were piled about everywhere.

The air in the store was foul and unwholesome, and there pa little girls who carried bundles in baskets ran about on their little thin legs, piping out shrill plaints.

Contemptuous

Gibbs was wearied the moment he entered and irritably waved aside the sleek, popish floorwalker. No one person to whom he spoke as he passed along was a private detective leaning against one of the pillars. Gibbs had already had dealings with him and had got back for him articles that had been stolen by certain women thieves who were adept in the art of shoplifting.

Gibbs went straight back to the elevator and rose lifted out of all this din and confusion into the comparative quiet of the second floor, where the offices of the establishment occupied a cramped space behind thin wooden partitions. Gibbs entered the offices and glanced about at the clerks who worked in silence. In each of them had been impressed a subdued, cowardly air. They glanced at Gibbs surreptitiously.

It was plain that all spirit had been drilled out of them. They were at work on something, but driven by their necessities, they were finishing it.

Gibbs felt a contempt for them as great as the contempt he felt for the floorwalkers below, a contempt almost as great as he had for himself. He thought of the man of about forty-five, with a black beard and a warm, kindly manner, who had once come up, and lifted his brows with amazement at finding him engaging in, emphatically for the door that was lettered "Mr. Bills."

"Mr. Bills is engaged just now," the man said in a hushed tone.

"Well, tell him Mr. Gibbs is here."

"But I cannot just now, sir; he's dictating." The man leaned forward and whispered the word "dictating" impressively.

But Gibbs kept on toward the door; then the man blocked his way.

"I tell you I want to," said Gibbs, "if not, I will."

Meets Bills

It seemed that Gibbs might walk directly through the man, who retreated from him, and, with a low bow, went through into Mr. Bills's door. A moment more and he held it open for Gibbs.

Bills was sitting at an enormous desk which was set in perfect order; on either side of him were boxes containing the letters he was methodically answering. Bills's head showed above the top of the desk; it was a round head covered with short black hair, smoothly combed and shining. His black side whiskers were likewise short and smooth.

His neck was bound by a white collar and a flaring white tie, and he wore black clothes. His smoothly-shaven face was bright and unctuous, and his deep, round eyes, behind which the devoutly anointed himself, with all after his battle.

In a prominent position, he had placed his own large enterprise, managed a popular Sunday school and a Sunday afternoon talks on "Success" for the instruction of the young men of the city, and on self and requirement to succeed as anything but Gibbs.

"Ah, Mr. Gibbs," he said. "You will pardon me if I continue."

Bills turned and resumed the dictation of his characteristic phrases of business. He dictated several letters, then dismissed his stenographer, and, leaning about, said with a smile:

"Now, Mr. Gibbs."

Gibbs drew his chair close to Bills's desk, and, in a low, menacing voice, looked, laid out the stanup.

Bills, a hundred and twos, fifty of ones, he said.

Bills took from off his gold glasses and slowly lowered them to the end of their nose, and, with the polished little red marks the glasses left on the bridge of his nose and in his manner there was a uncertainty that seemed unexpected by Gibbs.

"I was about to suggest, Mr. Gibbs," said Bills, placing his fingers tip to tip, "that you see our Mr. Wilson; he manages the mail-order department now."

"Not for mine," said Gibbs decisively. "I've always done business with you. I don't know this fellow Wilson."

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

GIVE up sweets and pastries; fat is due to the gas which produces a chemical change from white to black in the compounds.

To wash fine muslin dissolve some borax in rapid water—one tablespoonful to each gallon of water—and rub out the worst lime leaves them for half an hour; lift them into a tub containing a strong lather of white curd soap and boiling water, and rub them gently. When quite clean, rinse, fold in a large white cloth or a sheet, or tablecloth and then twist through the wringer. If white, rinse in blue water. If cream, a bag of bran stirred into the water will give the desired tint. When almost dry, iron while it is warm, not very hot, iron.

* * *

When furniture is bruised if the wood is merely dented in, and not broken, the mark can usually be removed by first wetting that part with water, doubling up a piece of brown paper several times, and placing it on the mark, and holding a very hot heavy warm iron, leaving it until the moisture has evaporated. If the application is not a success, it must be repeated.

Archie's heart came to his throat. A great rage suddenly seized him, a hatred of the whole body of Kouka and of his kind—a hatred that is savage when it is forged from the best loyalty, viciously, remorselessly into that fierce spirit there where the residence not across the nose—grinding his best down, boiling the tongue much length to for some reason Kouka suddenly released his hold.

Insane Thoughts

"You'd better duck out o' here, young fellow," Kouka was saying. "You hear?"

Archie heard, but it was a minute before he could fully realize that Kouka knew nothing after all.

"You hear?" Kouka repeated, bringing his face to Archie's.

"Yes, I hear," said Archie suddenly, as it seemed, but thankfully.

"Then let me see you around any more, you."

Archie, saved by some instinct, did not reply, and he did not wait for Kouka's word, but hurried quickly away, for he could easily feel, stood watching him. He went on half a block and paused in a shadow. He saw Kouka still standing there, looking intently down the street away.

Archie paused in the shadow; he thought of Kouka, remembering all the detective had done to him; the cigarette, those forty days in the workhouse; he thought of Rostwick, of the city attorney of the town that seemed to stand behind him; the littleness of those days in the workhouse came back to him, and the force of all the accumulated hatred and vengeance that had been born there in him doubled and quadrupled in his heart, and he stood there, white, black, mad, insane thoughts flooding his reason.

Then he stripped his roll of money, he pressed his new revolver and he felt a kind of wild, primitive, savage satisfaction—the same primitive satisfaction that Kouka and Besiewicz, the city attorney, the whole police force and the whole city had seemed to take in sending him to the workhouse. And then he went on toward the Tenderloin.

CHAPTER III.

THERE, never sure that the police would keep their word with him, rose earlier than usual the next morning, ate his breakfast, called a cab—he had an eccentric fondness for riding about in hansom-cabs—and was driven rapidly to the corner of Hiff

HENNA TEA FOR HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me if henna tea darkens the hair, and also how to prepare it? CONSTANT READER.

HENNA tea, or, better still, the paste, will darken the hair and is harmless. If you desire the tea, use an ounce of the henna to a pint of water and boil it until it is reduced to a pint. Apply with a tooth brush, taking care that it is regularly applied all over the hair. If you prefer the paste, make it with powdered leaves and water, and spread it well over the hair, allowing it to dry on, when it can be brushed off. Then shampoo the hair, and let it dry thoroughly before putting it up. Always thoroughly shampoo the hair and dry it before beginning the henna treatment.

MAKE HAIR CURLY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please tell me of something that will make my hair curly besides doing it up on curlers?

READER.

MAKE a solution of 120 grams potassium carbonate, 1 fluid dram ammonia, 12 fluid drams alcohol, enough water to make 16 ounces. Moisten the hair with this and adjust loosely when it will curl upon drying.

NOVELTIES AT STATIONER'S

A WOMAN looking for unique place cards found beauties at the stationer's the other day. They were intended for dinners at midnight, and were of wide bandoline, but there is no reason why these novelties should be confined to such and shouldn't take advantage of them. A lovely cut paper card, with a wreath of holly and pine cone, with foliage. There are nuts in two shades of green, also chrysanthemums and Autumn leaves.

For children's party invitations were delicately colored little folders conveying the invitation in a fascinating way, and begging the guest "not to mind if it is informal."

The most recent novelty in crepe paper is covered with brown bears, about the size of the "Teddy" most carried. A pleasant jap ladies with fans, quite shocking are rows through hearts and clever blossoms and aztec figure on other new crepe papers.

JEWELED SKIRT HOLDERS

JEWELED Hearts as skirt holders have recently been used by the Queen of Spain, as well as the Queen of Italy. When the skirts are not quite long enough to be a troublesome length, difficult to hold up, and these pretty ornaments come well to the rescue.

They are from four to six inches long, and made and enameled to imitate the animal. Some are entirely made of diamonds, but silver gilt with emerald eyes are more generally useful.

Beneath the neck of these lizards are a couple of prongs, which turn downward, and similar ones spring from the bodies, and the length of skirt is caught between the two. They are decidedly ornamental as well as useful.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

LEVELS DIFFERENCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl a little over eighteen years of age, and am employed in an office at a very small salary, but owing to the fact that we have a large family and I am the only one at home who is old enough to work I have to put up with quite a lot. During the last couple of months I have met a gentleman about forty who, I learn, is worth quite a considerable amount of money. Recently he proposed to me and I am in quite a fix to know whether I should accept or not.

Kindly let me know as soon as possible, as I think quite a lot of this gentleman, but do not think it proper for a girl my age to marry such an old gentleman. I care quite a little for him.

L. F.

HE is a great deal older than you are but he is still a young man, and if you love him I see no reason why you should not marry him and be very happy.

Think it all well over before you take any decisive step.

SOMETHING WRONG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am going with a young man who says he loves me dearly. He flatters me a great deal and says he would like to have such a pretty friend. But that troubles me a great deal is that whenever we go out together he seems to be afraid some of his family will see him. Now, I don't see why he should. If he is so proud of me I don't see why he should be afraid some of his family should see him. He may be bashful, or perhaps are account of his being so young (twenty) his people may not care to have him keep company yet.

ANXIOUS.

I DO not like his way of treating you.

If he is proud to have you for a friend he should be proud to introduce you to his family. If I were you I would have nothing to say to a man who treated me in that way. There must be something wrong about him or he would not be so ness for riding about in hansom-cabs—and should not marry him and be very happy, anxious to conceal his friendship with you.

Girls, Don't Fail to Form the Right Kind of Friendships

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE other evening the train on which I was travelling stopped at a pretty little village in which there is situated a girls' boarding school.

The school was evidently opening for the Fall term on that day, and a great many girls got off the train. A number of other girls who had arrived on earlier trains were at the station to meet their friends, and such a chattering and giggling and excitement you never saw.

It sounded like a great cageful of happy, twittering birds.

All the staid old people on the train looked on with smiling sympathy and perhaps a little envy of the irresponsible youth and joyousness in the gay, young faces.

Every minute some girl would make a little rush at some other girl, exclaiming: "You dear thing; I am so glad to see you; I have such oceans of things to tell you."

Make Friends

IT was a pretty scene, and the girls all seemed happy and wholesome and delighted with each other again.

Very often you hear a girl spoken of as "a man's girl," which means that she does not like girls' society and only takes the trouble to be pleasant when men are around.

I don't think much of that sort of girl. The really nice girl is just as popular with her own sex as she is with men.

No girl can afford to be without girl friends. There is nothing more beautiful than a true and lasting friendship between two girls.

But real friendship carries its responsibilities, girls, and is not to be lightly looked upon.

If your friendship is real, you will believe no evil of your friend unless you have positive proof that it is true, and then you will give her the chance to vindicate herself.

And, what is more, you will listen to no gossip about her and allow no one to speak against her in your presence.

You will hold her confidence as sacred as you expect her to hold yours.

You will be happy in performing any service for her, ready to rejoice with her or to sympathize, as the case may be.

As you grow older and both marry, your paths may lie wide apart, but all through your life the feeling of friendship will last, and you will always have the satisfaction of knowing that you and she understood each other, and it will be a keen pleasure to meet even after years of absence.

Real Friends Few

THE girl who is catty toward her own sex will never have any girl friends.

Other girls are afraid of her sharp tongue. You see the catty girl in almost every line of business. She always eats her lunch between times and sees home alone.

You can't fly into a real friendship with a girl the first time you meet her. You may be very much attracted to her and feel that you would like to know her better, but it takes time to form a real friendship.

Don't confide your secrets to a girl until you are very sure of her friendship and sincerity.

You can have a great many very pleasant acquaintances, but you can have but few friends in the real sense of the word. Treat them with the honor and affection which they deserve.

Only Nine Lucky Wedding Days Left

HE has proposed. If he hasn't, he will in a day or two. Isn't that right? Then the next thing is to find out the wedding day. A lot of people do this in a happy-go-lucky way. Others select some day they think is their luckiest. A few use anniversaries of great events in their lives.

Would you want to select a date forecasted by the stars as being propitious? If you do, here is your chance. Pilpay II. is the astrologer who has picked the days. He says he is a direct descendant of the great known Pilpay, or Bidpai, who was a Brahmin gymnosophist—that's a long word, but you must consider it to mean a very wise man. He lived several centuries before Christ.

Whether his descendant is so wise is not known, but he says if you must marry in the month of January, only on the days called good, and do not dare to marry on those called bad. Here is the chart:

| | Good days. | Bad days. |
|---|---|---|
| October | 7 12 27 | 9 23 30 |
| November | 1 16 21 | 3 14 29 |
| December | 1 6 11 16 27 | 12 15 24 |

Now comes a long bow at the fateful influence of the planets. Astrologers have been known to make a fortune by their knowledge of great events in their lives.

Thus, for instance, the rupture of Josephine's marriage with the Emperor Napoleon's marriage with the Empress Josephine is traced to the fact that their horoscopes were more or less harmonious, their horoscopes were particularly antipodean.

Then George IV., born on August 12, 1765, was not happy with his wife, Caroline of Brunswick, born on May 17, 1768. Astrologically, the reason was dangerous horoscopes, a cause to which Shakespeare also attributes the disagreement of Henry VIII. with his various wives.

MARIE DORO ACHIEVES SUCCESS IN STAR PART

Dainty, Winsome Actress Creates Role of Carlotta in "Thé Morals of Marcus" Here.

Bobbing up once in a while from a sea of words—words which, in many cases, were yards long—little Marie Doro, looking like an elf in her daintiness and witchery, was rescued alike from the sea, and the evil designs of a man and woman at the Park theatre last night. It was the first performance in America of W. J. Locke's play, "The Morals of Marcus," and the first appearance of Miss Doro as a star under the management of Charles Frohman.

It was a pronounced personal success for Miss Doro. While she was on the stage she interested everybody. Her great brown eyes, the delicate moulding of her face, her tiny figure and her childish ways—all fitting the character to a nicety—were really fascinating. Her role is a very exacting, running the entire gamut of emotions and in no instance does she fall below the standard. As Carlotta, the waif, she is irresistable; as Carlotta, the beloved ward of Sir Marcus, she is entrancing; as Carlotta, the returning martyr, she is exciting as well as an interesting entertainment. George H. Garry, as Adrian Harrington, played the heavy role to perfection. Mary Cumpton, as Bowery Lil, a swell crook, did herself credit. The company is a good one and Mr. Tornberg is very welcome addition to the list of sympathetic character actors.

SINGERS WIN PLAUDITS IN GOOD OPERA

Lovers of pretty and tuneful comic opera, richly staged and well sung, were regaled with the opening revival of "The Beggar Student" at the Castle Square Tremont last night. While scarcely as well known as some of the recent offerings of the present Castle Square season, the Polanese creation was none the less heartily received. The Beggar Student is well adapted to the powers and abilities of the Castle Square company.

Miss Hattie Belle Ladd sang her way into decided favor as Countess Pallandine. Miss Clara Lane's voice is beautifully adapted to the delightful song of Laura, and Miss Louise Le Baron made a vivacious and effective Bronislawa, signing her role with many clever bits of comedy. The rather than adds to the interest. George Shields, massive of figure as well as voice, and Harry Davies made a clever Ollendorf.

Probably the chorus reached its best in the wedding scene at the close of the second act, which, by the way, reveals one of the most magnificent sets of stage settings ever seen at the Castle Square.

THREE DIFFERENT ROLES IN ONE DAY BY MISS BATES

Play "Madam Butterfly" Here for First Time, Also New Comedy and "The Girl."

It isn't often that an actress in Boston is called upon to play three roles in one day, but that is what was done at the Majestic Theatre yesterday. Further than that, the three roles represented widely different types, but so skillfully were they portrayed that those who were fortunate enough to witness them could scarcely believe that three actresses did not fill them. There was only one, however, and she was Miss Blanche Bates. "Madame Butterfly" and "My Aunt's Advice" were given in the afternoon, while in the evening "The Girl of the Golden West" began its third and last week. The afternoon production was before an audience that made up in appreciation what it lacked in size. In the evening the old Blanche Bates's story of "not even standing room" was told again.

"Madame Butterfly" is a dramatization by David Belasco of the novel of John Luther Long. It was written especially for Miss Bates, and yesterday's presentation was the first in this city. The story is one of the prettiest, and at the same time one of the most tragic that has ever been seen on a Boston stage.

As is usual in Belasco creations, the play is filled with situations where for several minutes there is not a word spoken. At such times Miss Bates is seen at her best.

"My Aunt's Advice" is a pretty little piece, brimful of ragtic farce. The character of Margaret Middleton gives Miss Bates an opportunity to display her ability in a character thoroughly modern. The special matinees will continue till Saturday, when the regular "Girl of the Golden West" performance will be given.

JEALOUSY GETS ITS OWN REWARD

Clyde Fitch's very talky, yet sometimes dramatically strong "The Girl with the Green Eyes," is the bill this week at the Boston Theatre, and the first night was done with remarkable skill by the stock company. The story treats of a woman's nervous jealousy, as the result of which and a husband's hopeless efforts to keep a secret all his wife's fears runs the gamut of the emotions and contains a few odd situations.

Miss Gertrude Gilson is a versatile actress and imparts to her role a remarkable range of emotional expression. Wilson Melrose makes a genuine Clyde Fitch husband. The play, which deals with a far from unusual domestic situation, gives these two the centre of the stage throughout. The other characters were almost uniformly well cast. There are many who have lines in "The Girl with the Green Eyes."

CHORUS GIRL IS HEROINE OF PLAY

"A Chorus Girl's Luck in New York" earned the applause of a large Grand Opera House audience last evening on its initial presentation.

The play here deals with the struggles of Grace Carroll, a handsome chorus girl, to extricate herself from the net of infamy into which she has been trapped by Walter Atherton, an artist and a man about town. As a villian, Thomas J. Tempest left nothing to be desired, while the work of Leila Shaw, the chorus girl, was strong, especially in the emotional parts.

The strong virtuous characters of the piece were furnished by Ralph J. Herbert as John Baird, a millionaire miner and Elenor Jennings, who was cast for Jack Carroll, a sister of Grace. Louie Mohlenheer, a bill collector, who was portrayed by Charles Blake, furnished the comedy. There are lots of thrills and much fun in this play.

TWO PLAYS REMAIN FOR ANOTHER WEEK

There were many disappointed playgoers at the Colonial Theatre last evening, but it was inevitable. The walls of that house are not made of India rubber, and it was impossible to hold all those who wished to see "The Follies of 1907." It is one of the liliest things that New York has yet sent to Boston circle. Lillie, with her amazonian drummer girls, takes the breath of the average playgoer.

This is the last week of "Divorcons," as played by Grace George and her company at the Hollis Street Theatre, and there was another large audience last evening to witness the sparkling comedy. This is a great bill strange for Miss George has always been a favorite comedienne, and in this play she has made an international reputation.

PICTURES AT THE HUB.

Max White, William H. Graves, Marie Camilla and Master Willie Daly scored big hits in the illustrated numbers at the Hub Theatre, where Miles Brother's moving pictures are the permanent attraction. The picture programme is one of the best offerings of the season. The ladies' orchestra, an additional feature, also supplied a very pleasing programme. The entire programme is all that could be desired and cannot be beaten anywhere for the price.

NEW PLAYER SEEN IN HEBREW ROLE

Patrons of the Globe Theatre were well pleased yesterday when they saw Samuel Forrestey in his new play "Abie, the Leader," a comedy drama portraying the life of the poor Hebrew of the Ghetto. The play pictures the love of a poor Hebrew for an only child, her subsequent sickness, the troubles which befall him. There are many thrilling incidents in the play, the opening scene is the sweat shop where life is very hard. A strike, a pawnbroker incident, and an exciting race track scene, which combines to make up the exciting as well as an interesting entertainment. George H. Garry, as Adrian Harrington, played the heavy role to perfection. Mary Cumpton, as Bowery Lil, a swell crook, did herself credit. The company is a good one and Mr. Tornberg is very welcome addition to the list of sympathetic character actors.

MANY CURIOS IN 'SCOLLAY SQUARE'

"In Scollay Square" is again the big feature at Austin & Stone's Museum. Musical entertainment is furnished by Professor Cohan Orchestra; John F. Breckenridge, comedy poet, and Sam Johnson, "on the top of a wagon," astonished the natives. Among other attractions were Lewis Joseph and Inez Alfonso, glass eater, and Punch and Judy. In the theatre the "Mistress Nell" is the one feature in the new programme. Comedians Cook, Milton, Larkin and Hylton, Vesta Gilmore, the Lorella sisters, Ida Campbell, Ruth Clark and other clever making up the bill. In the vaudeville the Whalens, hoop rollers; Tom Batchman, monologist; Davis and Sherry, in acrobatic comedy; Bonfor and Quinn, in a comedy sketch; Van Mendens and Vera Belasco and the Meadows comedy company were conspicuous.

"GIRL OF WORLD" AT BOWDOIN SQUARE

"A Girl of the World" proved especially attractive yesterday. It strikes the popular fancy and is based on the efforts of a man to win the heart of a girl, either by fair or foul means. In this instance, Nat Goodwin already betrothed to William Sterling, a society man. Harrington Wells, worth, her sweetheart, seeks to break up this engagement by making love to the girl. Sterling, however, is a villain in disguise and Sterling claims Virginia. In the cast which was presented by Clayton Legge and Jane Stuart were also seen Monte Brown, Frank Conroy, Florence Hale, Mabel Florence, Edwin Denison, Harry Leland, Tommy Shearer and Harry Brooks. The moving pictures were much enjoyed.

Great Shows at Local Variety Houses

Keith's Theatre

At Keith's this week there are no less than eight star acts on the bill, most of whom the patrons of the house have seen before, but that did not lessen the enthusiasm.

The "star" act of the long list was Charles F. Semon, a musical wizard, who was billed as "the narrow feller," and, who on the stage certainly lives up to the title, but it can truthfully be said that whatever he may lack in weight in the lower extremities, he is very weighty in musical comedy and the ability to set forth catchy airs from almost any old thing.

Happy "Pete" Bailey, assisted by Lillian Hoerlin, and a dozen or more pets, also brought out a lively little musical comedy billed "Nearly a War Correspondent," but it is nothing more than a pocket edition of Mr. Bailey's successful musical comedy of last year "The Press Agent." Stella Mayhew brought her own leader, her weight and likewise a coal, consequently with this array that taxed the gray matter of the "seventy man, she did her utmost to meet the encores that were demanded of her. Lew Hoehn, father of trained monkeys, had a number of new songs and parodies, but if he did at the time of writing his work would be more appreciated by the patrons. Others on the bill were Thomas F. Donnelly and Zelda Rotair, of local fame, in a sailors' dance; Willie Weston, imitations; Paulton and Dooley, comedy cyclists; Anderson and Burt, colored comedians, in songs and dances; Clara Bellerian, trapeze equilibrist, and Salerno, the really great juggler, who holds forth next week.

Howard Athenaeum.

Pat White and his "Skinny Girls" seemed to satisfy the crowd which thronged the Old Howard yesterday. The burlesquers, "Cases on the Bat" and "Up Town and Out Drug Store," as fanny productions were decidedly successful. Apart from the management present Joe Kobe and Joseph Ayville in their novelty; Frey Brothers, athletes; Valvegas, head balancers; Du Elmo, musical clowns; Cramer and Beverly, singers and dancers; Edwards and Kennell, sketchists; Sarrella, continental oddities; Fred Bernelow, high free comedian; John McGuire, vocalist, and the moving pictures.

Tremont Theatre.

Performing dogs are not a rarity on the vaudeville stage, but such an act as that by Barnold's dogs and monkeys, at the Tremont this week, is indeed a rarity, and appeals to young and old alike as a real classic. Not a human being appears, but the setting represents a busy street, and all the characters are portrayed by dogs or monkeys. There is the lady out shopping, the barber's shop, the grocery, complete, and finally the intoxicated dog who ends support at the lamp post and is arrested. The audience almost goes into hysterics at his antics. It is the best number on the bill, and the merry old Cohan's "Governor's Son," with half a dozen beauties in white, gowns, and real comedians and lots of ginger makes a lively number, and W. J. Fields, Bailey Ziger, does a quiet act but an exceptionally clever one, full of dry humor. Johnny Hyams and Leila McIntyre have an interesting sketch called "Two Hundred Wives," and Joe Welch is back in Boston with his inimitable if somewhat vulgar monologue. The three Keatons handily execute their pieces of brilliancy, for their act has been seen so many times that about all the fun is left in it for them. Collins and Brown, alleged German comedians, are decidedly out of place in advanced vaudeville. Ben Nathan presents a novel wire act and the Hesse family some startling acrobatic feats.

Columbia Theatre.

It would be hard to find a more satisfactory show in a burlesque theatre than that by the Avenue Girls at the Columbia on "Tom, Tom and Harry." The show gave Dave Conroy, John C. Hanson and Joe Elmore plenty of opportunities, and they made good. Miss Libby Blondell, one of the favorites in the days when Manager Farren was a producer, got a royal reception and even her decidedly indecent allusions were taken by surprise at her splendid work, which is far and away ahead of her former efforts. Miss Blondell's presence and artistic work carry an inferior show through, but surrounded as she is by three stellar comedians the Columbia show this week should be a delight to lover of light comedy should endeavor to see.

Orpheum Theatre

"The Haired Girl from Houghton & Dutton's" is the way she is billed at the Orpheum. Miss Helen Gannon is the name known to her friends. An attractive woman with a splendid voice, who should do well in vaudeville was the verdict of the big audience. She more than made good. Her songs were of the latest, and the bill belong to Carroll Johnson and his company of fourteen people, singers and dancers, in scenes of plantation life. They have a fine quartette, and Mr. Johnson and her company in "Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband." De Witt, Burns and Torrence in "The Awakening of the Toys" present a novel acrobatic act, which is seldom equalled. Gardan and Zeno are wonders in a flying trapeze act, and the clown of the trio got off with a couple of stunts worth the price of admission. The young people from Vassar College team received a hearty hand for turning twenty-five back somersaults from setting to their cousins.

Lyceum Theatre

The clever comedians, Ben Jansen and Mike Kelley, are leading a bunch of entertainers in the "Bowery Burlesquers" this week. It is a medley-go-as-you-please scenes as viewed daily in the lower section of the great metropolis. Gallagher and Barrett, Market Police Court, and leads also into an artist's studio. The next also includes Cain and Rooney, Ella "Pig in Full Dress" Arthur and Ethel Miller, Whitman and Bowery dancers, Carmella D'Elcedore, animated Venus; Harry Kelsey, Lindsay and Fanny, a bunch of fun; Harry Hols, in humoristic phraseology; Lew Lindsay, funny rube and jolly coon; Clara Douglass, Alma Barman, Ida Barton, Gertie Hart and a score of girlies in musical medleys.

Palace Theatre

At the Palace this week are Weber & Rush in Two Fun Extravaganzas, engaged in two funny burlesques entitled "Pousse Cafe" and "The Girl from Mars." The leading comedy role is played by Guy Rawson, while Frances Clare heads the big chorus. The olio present The Girl with the Red Mask, assisted by a quartette of English girls; Woods & Green, comedians; Hanlon & Clare in "Just Kids;" Ben Pierce, German comedian; and new pictures. The Palace company is made up of Evans Trio, comedians; Cunningham and D'Leoy, comedy sketchists; Ryan and Richfield, singing and dancing comedians; Lillian Shaw, character comedienne; Lillian Mortimer and company, in "Mrs. Temple's Telegram;" Ward Brothers, comedy acrobats; Lillian Wilkes, soprano, and Lillian Shaw, character comedienne; Lillian Mortimer and company, in "Mrs. Temple's Telegram;" Ward Brothers, comedy acrobats; Lillian Wilkes, soprano, and the moving pictures.

Anty Drudge Explains Why.

Mrs. Don'tcare—"Yes, but soap is soap, and it doesn't matter which we use."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, and medicine is medicine, but it does matter which kind you take. And it is the same way with soap. Some will do the work and some won't. I know from experience that Fels-Naptha is the only kind of soap that will wash things clean in cold or lukewarm water. It isn't just soap; it is a different and easier way of washing."

"Soap is soap" said a woman. Her only idea of soap was something to mix with hot water in order to make a steaming suds. She thought it didn't matter which kind she used—and it didn't.

But if she had used Fels-Naptha in the way it should be used, in cold or lukewarm water, she would have learned that Fels-Naptha is not only a soap but a different way of washing.

A sewing machine is of no use to a woman who doesn't know how to use it. Neither is any other labor-saving device.

Before you use a cake of Fels-Naptha, then, read carefully the directions printed on the back of the red and green wrapper. The directions will tell you how to make Fels-Naptha do the hardest part of your washing, without hot fires, without steaming suds, without boiling or back-breaking hard labor. It will save your clothes, save time, save fuel, save your health and the clothes will be cleaner and whiter than ever before.

But not unless you use it the Fels-Naptha way. Look for the red and green wrapper.

One woman, in Lowell, Mass., writes: "The Fleisher Yarns are the best without exception. The articles will last even longer than one cares to have them, and they will hold their color under ordinary washing." Another, in Providence, R. I., says that she has a sweater made of the Fleisher Yarns "which after two years of wear is firm in texture and thoroughly good in every way." Striking evidence that the Fleisher Yarns stand the test of wear and wash.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Never before has such interest been taken in a baseball game in this city as exists in the opening battle for the world's championship pennant, between the Tigers, winners of the American League flag, and the Cubs, winners of the National League title, which will be played here to-day.

It is expected that when the game is called there will be 30,000 people inside the park. All day long runs from all parts of the country have been coming into town, and everywhere baseball talk is heard.

Chicagos Are Favorites.

The Chicagos are favorites in the betting at 10 to 7, but admirers of the Detroit team are gobbling up all the wagers at eight at times unexpected odds. Shrewd followers of the diamond sport can't figure why the Cubs should be such favorites, especially after the great showing made by Hugh Jennings' men in the last two weeks of the race, while the Cubs were not doing much of anything.

"Wild Bill" Donovan, whose record for the season is the greatest ever turned in by a twirler, will be on the rubber for the visitors to-day, while either "Three-Fingered" Brown or Dale Overall, probably the latter, will twirl for the home team.

Schulte, who has been suffering for some time with a bad leg, will most likely be seen in right field, while Hofman, who has been covering the position, will be benched, and may not be seen in the series.

The players of both teams are confident of ultimate victory. The Detroit leader is very sanguine of success. Here is what Hugh Jennings says:

"We'll Win."—Jennings.

"We'll win the World's Championship just as we won the American League pennant; that means it will be a desperate fight. The Tigers are stronger than any team in the American League and stronger than the best club in the National League. We have been playing good ball now for two months straight, and I do think that we are going to fall down this week. I think the Cubs a wonderful ball club and a chance a great leader, but we have the fellows who will break the combination up. I would not be surprised, however, to see the full series games played. Our pitchers are not in the best of condition, but four of them are ready for the games."

The Chicago manager, Frank Chance, is equally confident. He declares "our fellows are in good shape to put up the fight of their lives. We will win the World's championship series sure. It got away from us once, but we will be on the lookout for it this time. We have had an easier time winning our pennant than Detroit had in the other race, but just the same the boys have played up in form all the time to fight at these unexpected odds. Shrewd followers of the diamond sport can't figure why the Cubs should be such favorites, especially after the great showing made by Hugh Jennings' men in the last two weeks of the race, while the Cubs were not doing much of anything.

LEACH MADE NEW RECORD

PITTSBURG, Oct. 8.—"Tommy" Leach, centre-fielder of the Pittsburg team, broke the world's record for circling the bases on the diamond during a field meet of the Pittsburg team. He completed the round of the bases in 14 seconds flat. The previous best time was made by Walter Clemens during the field day at Cincinnati last month, when he made the distance in 14 1-5 seconds.

In addition to this feat Leach captured four out of the five events of the day and all four of the events in which he was entered. Leach won the hunt and run to first in 10 seconds. Fleigh won the "Senate-throwing-by-catchers" contest. Leach won the circling of bases in 14 seconds, won the accurate-throwing-from-outfield contest and won the contest for circling the bases with slides into second and third bases in 16 1-5 seconds.

OVERALL OF THE CUBS.

The big fellow will face the Tigers in one of the championship games in Chicago.

TOMMY QUILL WILL MEET BILLY GLOVER

The big show for the Providence fight fans comes on October 15, at the Thornton Club, when Billy Glover, the fast South Boston boy, who has been beating everything of his weight over in New York recently, stacks up with Tommy Quill in a fifteen-round bout.

Quill is one of the toughest boys in the ring and has been winning steadily from good boys. Over in Philadelphia a couple of weeks ago he put it all over Young Erne, considered the best boy among the lightweights in the Quaker town.

It will be a slashing mill, as both boys are known as fighters and neither will be shy stepping into their opponents. There will be no waits when they get together in the ring.

Matchmaker Johnny Mooney is making up the card and it will be a swell re-opening of the Blood A. C., by which title the Thornton Club it now known.

There is little chance of the second game between the Doves and Tigers being played to-day at the South End grounds on account of the rain.

They may not be playing for pennies, the two Boston teams, but you would think so to see them in the present series, which is on this week and settles the Rube championship and incidentally gives the winning team a lot of prestige with the fans.

The Americans got the first knockout in the opening game of the series yesterday, but the Doves are far from taking the count and will have their rival ball tossers over on their own grounds for the next game.

The crowds are note the fact that there is a good work of these men in left wonderful starting.

CHANGE IN YALE LINEUP.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—The Yale coaches pestered Ja ne Pullin in the varsity lineup in place of Berger. The change was made because of the former's pulling ability. The whole team did the scrub played a mixed game Cambridge. There was much time lost.

TWO BOWDOIN MEN HURT.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Oct. 8.—Sweetland and Cleaves, two varsity football players on the Bowdoin team, are out with injuries. Sweetland cut his arm in the Exeter game, and vaccination it was found that it had a bad case of blood poisoning, and he is now in the hospital. Cressey, while scrubbing for the team, was cut on the nose by the ball, breaking that organ.

HARVARD ROUNDING INTO SHAPE FOR BATES GAME

Harvard's football team is coming into good shape for the game with Bates at Cambridge to-morrow afternoon. A long practice will probably be indged in to-day, and it is expected the men will be in form to wipe the earth with the Bates eleven.

A notable move has been made by Coach Crane by taking Brennan, the varsity pitcher, and Cutting, the tennis player, from the second team and advancing them for the varsity squad. This is a re

YALE CREW OUTLOOK IS DISMAL

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—Josh Kennedy, coach of the Yale crew, said after the tea from practice on the harbor "Present conditions in the Yale navy are discouraging, for of last season's eight only four men are out this Fall, and there is a dearth of secondary material to give the varsity men anything of a rub in practice.

"Those of last season's eight who are out are Captain C. B. Ide, '7, and Architectes, bow; H. A. Howe, '6, and W. K. Rice, '7, at the varsity four oar will row. Some finished oarsmen, three men below available as freshmen: L. R. Robbins, W. E. Deming and J. Mayer. As yet Kennedy has not formed a varsity boat, but the men are out this Fall, and there is a dearth of secondary material to give the varsity men anything of a rub in practice.

"The first management meets this week to decide upon a suitable date for the Fall regatta. It will be held after the first part of Oct month on Lake Whitney. It is expected that a dozen or more class crews will compete, club crews will race, a varsity boat will be picked to give an exhibition two-mile row and several four oared boats will be sent out.

"Kennedy and Ingalls agree that their only salvation lies in developing new material. They have already cut down the big squad of candidates, weeding out all possible men and encouraging those who show any form or promise.

DESHLER WILL MEET O'BRIEN THIS EVENING

There is great interest in the bout to-night between Dave Deshler of Cambridge and Rouse O'Brien of South Boston, which will be held at Chelsea. These lads are both on edge, and they will certainly give both one scrap that will be worth going a long ways to see. Deshler is the most clever boxer of the two, and is also a hard hitter, but O'Brien has a lot of steam behind his punches, and is a fighter from the word go.

Rouse said yesterday that it was a lucky thing for Deshler that there is to be no award made at the end of the ten rounds, for if one were coming it would be "on a plate and on a platter." The Cambridge boxer thinks just the same as Rouse, and the fans are due to get all the benefit to-night.

The bill not be all this will offer, however, for Jenny Ryan and his old-time friend, Jack Mahan, who are now on and but good spanking terms, are out to decide which is the champion of Cambridge.

There will be at least five not preliminaries bouts provided through the competition, in which several classy aspirants have entered. The bouts will be at the rate of one-to-night to weigh in between 6 and 7 o'clock.

JONES SAYS COBB LEADS ALL PLAYERS

Manager Fielder Jones of the Chicago White Sox makes the statement that Frank Isbell, one of the Sox, is a better all-around player than Hans Wagner, and also declares that Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers, is the most valuable man to a team playing ball this season, the same as Hal Chase was last year.

"Isbell is a better all-around player than Wagner," says Jones. "I am willing to bet he can beat Honus at any of the leading clubs that were pulled off at the Felt-nall field games. Isbell can play any position in the field and can make good at every creditable game right now. He will be with the team on the Eastern trip, and he is going to be a big help to us in the wind up.

"Cobb is the most valuable man in the game as a run-getter, which is what counts most after all. I don't say he's the best batter or the best fielder, but he is the most valuable all-around man this season. He is to the Detroit team what Hal Chase was to the Highlanders last season, and I'm afraid Jennings is speaking him down just as Chase was broken down from his high speed in the New York club. Cobb is the find of the year and his work has come a long way toward putting the Tigers where they are to-day."

BAY STATE A. A. IS IN PROSPEROUS CONDITION

BY J. C. KERRISON.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Bay State Automobile Association held yesterday afternoon many matters of importance to the organization were considered in detail, and certain actions taken which promise well for the very near future. Secretary Forrestor read twelve applications for membership, all of which were favorably acted upon, which shows beyond question that the organization is making advancements in membership as well as in other directions. The clubhouse committee stated that the attendance at lunch has greatly increased since the table d'hote plan had been revived, with indications of still larger attendance in the near future.

The gymkhana events of the club, to be held at the Newton Athletic grounds Saturday next, should appeal to every one who is interested in motoring. The events selected are such as will unquestionably furnish no end of amusement, and the list of entries will be a most excellent one.

Manager Charles E. Fay of the Ford Company was out in the open country for the first time since his experience in the railroad collision at Providence last week. Mr. Fay looks much the worse for wear, but has great hopes of being able to look over his business affairs within the next two or three days.

R. B. Van Dyke, assistant to the vice-president of the American Locomotive Automobile Company, left New York a few days ago for a carriage trip of two weeks through the Catskills, in his forty-horse power Berliet. In his interview in New York Mr. Van Dyke suggests that he is being hoaxed into strenuous touring by the "go" of the car. On the day he left the city he made sixty-four miles before breakfast, which was eaten at Newburg at 8 a. m. This, he admits, is ambitious for pleasure travelling, but he says that the car run it easily. His first day's run was to Stamford, N. Y., a distance of nearly 200 miles.

* * *

While the modern motor car has reached a wonderful stage of development, it is still susceptible of much improvement and it will be ultimately the user's loss if prices are forced downward before the process of construction is said. With profits reduced to the narrowest margin, the crowded in the industry will have no choice but to cling to the reproduction of their established types. Improvement will stop abruptly, when the problem of the day becomes how to build how cheap.

* * *

Coming at a time when track racing is up for investigation, the fatality at Morris Park, New York, recently, is apt to militate against those who favor this phase of sport. Should the A. A. A. decide to further sanction track contests, it will be a staggering blow to the promoters of them as well as to the managers of many county fairs.

* * *

A race in which a horse, a man, and an automobile competed was run on a one-mile circular track at a recent county fair. The event was down on the program as "One mile, Horse Man Auto handicap." The horse was given 220 yards, the man 440 yards, and the automobile, which looked as if it might have been antique when George R. Selden was a boy, started from the firing line. The automobile nobbled first, the horse being but a eighteenth length behind, while the man was advertised for next meeting in the "Dead" column of the local paper.

GRAND CIRCUIT MAY HAVE NEW PRESIDING JUDGE

Special to the Boston American.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 8.—If the dope of the leading horsemen here can be relied upon, another season will see a new presiding judge upon the Grand Circuit in place of George W. Hyatt, who has filled the position since the organization of the Grand Circuit stewards.

His work in the round this year has not appealed to the followers of the circuit as being up to the high standard required. John McCartney, one of the well-known Western judges, has also evinced the general opinion when he declared himself in the following words:

"I watched Hyat closely, and am frank in saying that he is not a satisfactory presiding judge.

"I have no doubt that he is an honest man, and I would not suggest that so much as a shade dishonorable has been committed by him in the administration of his office, but he has failed completely in doing either himself or

"He has shown repeatedly that he has a student of the racing rules that he is no; a keen and close observer, and that he is really helpless as an official.

"He shows no real interest or enthusiasm in the race itself; lacks energy and administrative ability, and pets about as much as a bump on a log. He has gone down in his studies when suffering from an attack of one of spring fevers, and days of nearness as presiding judge in the Grand Circuit are scarce, and to justice to himself and the good of racing he should resign.

"I state these but the kindliest feelings for Mr. Hyatt personally, and he's a splendid man, but his personality has nothing to do with the question. His office is one thing so far and away more important than my own man's genial personality, and Mr. Hyatt should step down and out."

SCHOOLBOY STARS ELIGIBLE.

At a meeting of the committee of the Interscholastic Football Association of high schools, held in the English High School yesterday afternoon, it was decided that Hall Haley, the clever Dorchester High left halfback, and William Dingley, the Roxbury High quarterback, were eligible to take part in the league games this Fall.

WIFE CROSSES OCEAN TO FIND LOST HUSBAND

Comes to Boston with Her Three Children in Effort to Locate Him.

FEARS WOMAN IN CASE

In an effort to locate her husband, who left here and her three small children three years ago, Mrs. "Chris" Malone, of Manchester, England, has crossed the ocean and is now in Boston looking for him.

Accompanied by her youngest child, she called at police headquarters to-day and appealed to Superintendent Pierce to help her in the search.

Mrs. Malone fears that there is another woman in the case. She is staying with her sister, Mrs. McGowan, of No. 5 Bennet street, Charlestown, and will leave no stone unturned to find him.

Taught School Before Marriage.

"Chris and I were married when he was a clerk for Mandelberg & Co.'s rubber works at Manchester, England, said Mrs. Malone to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "and we lived very happily for several years. I was a school teacher before marriage.

"Chris worked hard and was gradually promoted until he became manager of the rubber works. Then a branch office was sent across the seas to open a branch office in Montreal. He left England January 28, 1904, leaving the children and me behind.

"I did not like the idea of his going so far away, so decided to go to Canada without all right. For eight or nine months he wrote me very often and sent me money, but last I heard from him was in February, 1905, when he wrote me that he had secured a better position with another firm in Winnipeg. Then I heard nothing more. The letters ceased and I appealed to the firm he formerly worked for. They could not find him.

"Shortly after I received a letter from a Mrs. Church, who lives in Montreal, Canada, and said that her nineteen-year-old daughter, Mary, who had been very friendly with Mr. Malone, had disappeared, and she feared that they were together. Mrs. Church's letter was a great shock to me.

Sister Receives Letter.

"Later I heard that my husband was in Richmond, Va., and about seven months ago my sister in Chicago received a letter from him, postmarked Philadelphia, asking me to forward quickly his things at that city, in care of the general delivery. I think this was a ruse to throw us off the track.

"I have written to Mrs. Church and she says that her daughter has not returned home, so that it looks to me as if Miss Mary knows where my husband is.

"I have come to this country to locate him, if possible, and have pawned my last piece of the Boston public. I want to find my husband and to settle this trouble before it goes any further.

"What my actions will be if I find him will depend wholly on how he is living."

Mrs. Malone is a very attractive young woman of twenty-nine. Her oldest child is nine years and her youngest eight.

Cold Piano Facts

We don't make any pianos. We don't advertise any special pianos. We have nothing special to say about any piano in particular. The Piano Trust is fighting us and we are fighting the Piano Trust tooth and nail. We ask no mercy—we expect none—and we give none. Trust pianos are fine, in fact some of the finest pianos in the world are in the Trust, and we sell these same pianos every week at Trust-fighting prices—Lower, away lower by many dollars than you can buy them any place in this wide world. We lose money, they say. Well, that's our loss then. What do you care? You buy your piano for less than cost. Come this week and see the fight.

Mr. Voter—Which Is Your Choice?

There Are THREE of Them; Take Your Pick

The courts will now have to decide whether Charles W. Bartlett or Henry M. Whitney is the legal candidate of the Democratic party for Governor.

The courts will decide which name shall go on the ballot, but the final decision in the case rests with a higher tribunal—THE PEOPLE.

Either Mr. Bartlett's name or Mr. Whitney's name may be placed upon the ballot by judicial decree, but that act will not make either of them a Democrat, nor will it make Democrats vote for either Mr. Bartlett or Mr. Whitney.

In the accompanying picture, Mr. Newberry, our cartoonist, has portrayed the problem which confronts the voter this Fall.

Shall he cast his ballot for a candidate whose election means the strengthening of "Boss" Lodge and the fastening of a Transportation Trust upon the business of New England?

Or shall he vote for one of the twin products of the Springfield riot which made every decent Democrat ashamed of the party?

Fortunately, the voter has a THIRD choice this year.

He does not have to choose between Guild, Lodge, the Trusts and High Prices on the one hand and Bartlett or Whitney, Corruption, Fraud and Riot, on the other.

There is still a third candidate for whom he may cast his ballot, and that candidate is THOMAS L. HISGEN of SPRINGFIELD.

Mr. Hisgen is a quiet, dignified GENTLEMAN, who believes in giving everybody a square deal. He is a FIGHTER, for he has fought the Standard Oil Company for years AND HAS MADE MONEY AT IT.

He was a good enough Democrat to be on the DEMOCRATIC TICKET last year and he was a good enough Republican to vote for Roosevelt in 1904. He believes in the Democracy of Jefferson and the Republicanism of Lincoln. In other words, he is an INDEPENDENCE LEAGUER.

If "Tom" Hisgen is elected, Mr. Mellen won't be permitted to annex all the railroads and trolley lines in New England. We have a feeling, too, that if Mr. Hisgen is elected Governor there won't be any more "strong arm" political conventions in Massachusetts—at least, not for a few years!

A Discovery That May Conquer the Air

WIRELESS POWER Will Give Man the Bird's Flight Multiplied a Thousand Times.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Just as man conquered the waters very slowly, so he is now conquering the air—very slowly.

The first men could cross the water only by swimming, or on floating logs. Then came the rough canoe, with the paddle. Then the bigger canoe, then the primitive sailboat, the invention of some forgotten genius of a hundred thousand years ago, and at last the steamship, the turbine, the motor boat and the submarine of to-day.

Man is not master of the air yet. A few years ago he was content to sit below a great bag full of gas, to rise and float like thistledown, wherever the wind might choose to take him.

Lately, he has done a little more. He has taken up with his balloon an engine and a screw to fight against the wind. The other day Count Zeppelin, a determined old man of seventy, who has devoted his fortune to navigation of the air, succeeded in controlling a slow flight for four hours above Lake Constance.

Some years ago in this newspaper we pointed out the fact that real aerial navigation would come with the discovery of some method for THE WIRELESS TRANSMISSION OF POWER.

The trouble with the modern air machine is this: Engines are heavy, fuel is heavy and the air is light. The heavier the engine the greater the power; but the heavier the engine the bigger the balloon to carry it and the more wind surface to be overcome.

It has recently been announced, without any especial excitement, that a man has succeeded in sending wireless POWER to some distance, and running a small train of cars with that power.

We know that men can now send messages through the air without any wires. Until recently we had required a wire in order to send messages. The Niagara waterfall will run engines of 20,000-horsepower many miles away, but a wire must carry the electric energy.

This new invention dispenses with the WIRES. Its complete development will mean perfected navigation of the air. The flying machine will receive its source of power from the ground, without wires; it will carry no fuel, no heavy engine, and its energy for fighting the wind, supplied from the earth in unlimited quantities, will conquer any adverse wind as the steamboat conquers tide or current.

Future men will undoubtedly travel through the air exclusively, except for short distances. Transatlantic and other routes will be mapped out high above the ocean. Travellers will look down at the curious, heavy boats and trains carrying loads of freight. Speeds undreamed of will be attained, and the home of man, if he chooses, will be as far from his place of work as is the nest of the albatross from her fishing grounds.

There will be strange changes in real estate values, stranger changes in the habits of the human mind.

Many will think this suggestion preposterous, but the time will come when man in his airship will go around the earth with the sun always directly above his head, if he chooses, going just as fast as the earth itself turns. That would require a speed of little more than only a thousand miles an hour.

And that will be only the beginning of man's conquest of material conditions here. A great future is before the human race. The earth, sea and air will be material possessions of man, and study of the wonders outside our own little planet will be his chief and noblest occupation.

Man was not made to grub and fight and die, glued to the ground. His brain will set him free, conquering superstition, poverty, ignorance and gravity.

I AM serenity. Though passions beat
Like mighty billows on my helpless heart,
I know beyond them lies the perfect, sweet
Serenity which patience can impart.
And when wild tempests in my bosom rage,
"Peace, peace," I cry, "it is my heritage."

I AM good health. Though fevers rack my brain
And rude disorders mutilate my strength,
A perfect restoration after pain
I know shall be my recompense at length.
And so through grievous day and sleepless night,
"Health, health," I cry, "it is my own by right."

I AM success. Though hungry, cold, ill-clad
I wander for a while, I smile and say,
"It is but for a time—I shall be glad
To-morrow, for good fortune comes my way;
God is my father; He has wealth untold;
His wealth is mine—health, happiness and gold."

Why the Simple Life?

By Winifred Black

DR. HINDHEDE, of Denmark, says that he can teach the world how to live on two cents a day and be happier and healthier and live longer than they did when they spent anywhere from $2 to $25 for twenty-four hours' nourishment.

Thanks, awfully, Dr. Hindhede. So delighted to hear from you.

Now, if you'll only teach us how to live without breathing and without laughing, without singing and without dancing, without walking and without loving, we'll turn into slugs and be done with it.

Wouldn't it be lovely to be a nice, fat, comfy slug, with nothing to do or to think or to dream or to hope or to work for? I'd love it, wouldn't you?

Two cents a day for food! Why, what are all the fruits and vegetables and good things made for, Dr. Hindhede—just to look at? I'd rather live ten years and have some fun while I was living than to creep around till I was a hundred and wish I was dead every minute.

I don't want to live on two cents a day, thank you; I wouldn't call it living at all.

I don't eat simply to support life.

I suppose I could get along on a cup of malted milk and a handful of nuts a day, but why on earth should I?

I don't like malted milk, and the only way to eat nuts is to sit around a blazing wood fire and pick them out of their shells while you're telling stories or singing songs or listening to some one read a good story.

I eat because I'm hungry and because things taste good, and I don't want anybody to tell me what to eat, either.

I'll pick out my own diet for my own self, thank you, and as long as I'm able to pay for it I'll eat the things that taste good to me and trust to luck to have them agree with me.

All the diet cranks I ever knew proclaim their fad as far as you can see them by the color of their skin and the lack of lustre in their melancholy eyes.

A good dinner is one of the pleasures of life, just as a good laugh is, or a good song, or a pretty story, or a brisk walk on a fine morning. And I'm not going to give up a good dinner just to please some one who wants to convince me that I'd be better off if I dined on a slice of dried apple and a prune. Keep right on figuring, Dr. Hindhede. It's all very well to be scientific, and we appreciate your efforts immensely.

You can't do any harm, because nobody will pay any attention to you but the diet cranks, anyway—and they might as well be following you as any one else.
